HARRY THAW IS SET FREE

TO REFUSE AUSTRIAN EMBARGO DEMAND

WASHINGTON, July 16.—A new phase of international controversy has developed in the semi-official announcement that the United States reply to the Austrian note asking for an embargo on arms by the United States will be made within a fortnight. It is understood the request will be denied.

Germany's intentions in her reply to the American note on the Lusitania will be explained today by Ambassador von Bernstorff in a conference with Secretary of State Lansing.

The former, it is said, will emphasize the point that the German reply was intended to pave the way for negotiations on the part of the United States with Great Britain as well as Germany, to adjust questions that have arisen over contraband and submarine, as affecting the rights of neutrals.

From Cornish, N. H., word is received that President Wilson, with additional memoranda from Secretary Lansing at hand, has begun to outline definitely the position he believes the United States must take as a result of the last note from Germany on submarine warfare.

EAGER TO CONCEDE.

The official conversation between the German ambassador and Secretary Lansing today is expected also to disclose the fact that Germany will try to avoid a rupture by making it appear that the failure to reach an understanding with the United States is not to be placed solely upon the Kaiser and his government.

Count von Bernstorff, it is believed, will insist that his government is eager to make concessions to perpetuate friendly relations with the United States.

But the understanding is pretty general that he will indicate to the Secretary of State that Great Britain must make concessions of equal importance and that it is the belief of his government that there are but two avenues by which a definite conclusion of the present controversy may be reached of which Germany favors the former.

TWO SUGGESTIONS.

They are:

One—The request that Great Britain designate a representative to discuss with an envoy of the German empire and the President of the United States a plan upon which the two countries might agree for a modification of the policy of marine warfare responsible for the complications now existing.

Two—The declination of the President, in acknowledging receipt of the last German communication, to make further representations or arguments in justification of his request contained in previous notes for a satisfactory explanation of and reparation for the acts of Germany's agents.

The first course obviously would result in general satisfaction all round—if the President should countenance such an undertaking. The second would result in ending all

"WIZARD" EDISON AND DANIELS PICK MEN FOR BOARD

ORANGE, N. J., July 16.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Thomas A. Edison talked for two hours here on the personnel of the advisory board of inventors and engineers which Mr. Edison is to direct and which is to work for the improvement of the United States army and navy.

Mr. Edison was asked what had been talked about and he said, "This whole thing is Secretary Daniels' idea; ask him. I think he will be able to tell you much more than I."

Dr. Daniels is now on his way back to Washington. He declined to make public the names of the men who are to work with Mr. Edison, saying he must reserve this announcement until after his return to the navy department.

He spoke extensively of his plans, however, intimating that the board would probably be restricted to four or five men, and those who heard him left satisfied in the belief that Mr. Edison would have as associates certainly Orville Wright, the master of aviation; Henry L. Ford, the motor genius, and Simon Lake, the inventor of the submarine.

The secretary left Washington accompanied by his aid, Lieutenant Commander Wurtzbaugh. They were met in Newark, N. J., by W. F. Hutchinson, an official of the Edison Company, and dined at his home, reaching Mr. Edison's home two hours later. Secretary Daniels and the inventor went into secret session at once.

U. S. Helps Car Strike Peace Move

PANIC AT FACTORY BLAZE

Three men and a girl were slightly burned and 150 employes fled panic stricken to the street when some one threw a cigarette into a can of benzine at the shoe factory of Levers & Sargent, No. 258 Broad street, Lynn, today.

The injured are Abraham Axelrod, Louis Andrest, Henry de San Rose and Mary Ross. All are burned about the face and hands, but none seriously.

The can was in the cleaning department, which employs about twenty girls and men. When the flash came the exploding benzine spattered over the men and set fire to the clothing of Miss Ross.

On hearing the cry of fire the employes of the factory made a dash for the street. Several were slightly bruised in the rush down the staircases.

The police estimate the fire and water damage at $1,000.

Today Gartside filed a bill in the Suffolk Superior Court asking that a receiver be appointed by the court to sell it and give each partner his share of the proceeds. A hearing will be held June 22.

TWO PLANS TO SETTLE STRIKE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 16.—Following the failure of the Rhode Island Company to successfully resume street car service today, two proposals of arbitration have been made.

The first was from Mayor Joseph H. Gainer. It appears to have some chance of success. Briefly, his plan contemplates the nomination of an arbiter by the railroad company and another by the union. He will name a third arbiter who shall be agreeable to both parties.

The second was from Secretary William B. Wilson of the United States Department of Labor. A telegram received at 10 o'clock this morning by Congressman George F. O'Shaunessy says:

In response to your telegram of yesterday I will immediately appoint Federal Commissioners of Conciliation to endeavor to adjust the street railway strike in Rhode Island. Will wire names as soon as selected.

WILLIAM B. WILSON, Secretary.

U. S. Department of Labor.

A heavy police guard surrounded the cars and car barns, but there was no disorder.

The tieup affects the whole State with exceptions of Newport and Westerly, which are served by other companies, and Rhode Island's thousands of workers were hard to find means of reaching their places of work.

CROWDS IN GOOD HUMOR.

Notwithstanding this the crowds took the delay good naturedly. Everything on wheels was pressed into service to take cars of the rush.

Even private automobiles with thrifty owners were on hand. Many automobiles of the rich were also in service. They picked up women and girls and took them to work without charge. Many private concerns had vehicles ready to take their employes to the factories.

Today it looks as if the company was preparing for a siege. All fences surrounding the company's property were rebuilt and strengthened. The big steel doors of the car barns were lowered today for the first time. Many strange men were seen on guard. The car barns look like forts.

Meanwhile the union has received information that strike-breakers, numbering many hundreds, are being mobilized by the company at outside points. Rumor has it that the strike-breakers will arrive in the city in a body and that the company will attempt to start every car it owns at the same time.

President Potter of the Rhode Island company today again emphatically denied that his company intends to use imported strike-breakers.

Among the union men distrust of arbitration proceedings is openly expressed

Man Claiming to Be an American Shot as Traitor

LONDON, July 16.—Frans Berka, a laborer, who claimed American citizenship, was shot for high treason at Mahrisch-Astrau, in Austrian Silesia, June 14, according to the Daily Chronicle, which says it gets its information from a copy of the official journal of the province of Silesia.

Berka, who was forty-six years old, says the Daily Chronicle, was tried before the military court charged with using two traitorous expressions in an inn at Cross Halendorf.

The expressions were alleged to be calculated to disturb the peace of the neighborhood.

The court sentenced the man to be hanged, but the sentence was changed to shooting and was carried out two hours after its pronouncement.

JUSTICE VACATES ASYLUM ORDER

NEW YORK, July 16.—Harry K. Thaw left for Philadelphia this afternoon by automobile.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Supreme Court Justice Hendrick today vacated the order committing Harry K. Thaw to Matteawan, approving the verdict that the slayer of Stanford White is sane, which was returned by a jury on Wednesday afternoon.

The State filed an immediate notice of appeal, which will delay Thaw's final release from the hands of the law for several months, but Justice Hendrick admitted him to bail in the sum of $35,000.

Thaw expressed his pleasure over the decision of Justice Hendrick, adding:

"It was no more than I expected. The jury found me sane, and I was confident that Justice Hendrick would approve of the decision. In appealing the case the State's lawyers are only spending more of the people's money."

In vacating the order committing Thaw to Matteawan Justice Hendrick rejected the petition of the State that Thaw be returned to the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, where he was an inmate for several years.

7,500 PERSONS IN CROWD.

At 10:30 o'clock the county courthouse corridors in City Hall Park and Chambers street were filled with a crowd of 7,500 people, all clamoring for admission to the courtroom.

An extra police guard was on duty at every entrance stairway and elevator and only those with cards of admission gained the 200 coveted seats in the courtroom. Most of these who gained the vantage points were women.

In the crowds outside betting was rife. The prevailing odds were five to one that Thaw would go free.

Under the noses of half a dozen uniformed policemen a bet was laid of $300 to $60 that Thaw would go free.

Thaw, wearing a brand new gray striped suit, was among the early arrivals. He was jaunty and smiling and showed the effects of a very recent haircut and shave.

"Nothing at all to say now," he told reporters as he breasted his way through the crowd into the courtroom. "My plans have all been upset by this delay."

It was 11:12 when Justice Hendrick mounted the bench. An air of tense expectancy settled over the crowded courtroom.

THE JUDGE'S RULING.

A jury, Justice Hendrick began abruptly, without preamble, "has declared that this relator is a sane man. That jury paid no attention to the testimony of the alienists. Neither have I paid any attention to that testimony. Alienists appeared here on both sides, and under hire, for pay, testified that this man is sane and insane.

"I hope that the law may some time be corrected to eliminate this farce of expert testimony.

"This court now finds that Harry K. Thaw is sane."

That was all the court said, but it meant that Thaw was a free man. He was committed to Matteawan in February, 1916, by Justice Dowling as not guilty of the murder of Stanford White, but insane, to be confined until released by due process of law. One of the processes of the law was for Thaw to be found sane. A jury of twelve men and a justice of the Supreme Court had found Thaw sane. Therefore he was unconditionally a free man.

Deputy Attorney-General Edgar A. Bronberger, for the State of New York, immediately gave notice of appeal on the part of the State. This meant that Thaw was technically in custody, as the court was bound to grant the right of the State to appeal.

John B. Stanchfield, chief counsel for Thaw, at once moved that Thaw be admitted to bail. Stanchfield urged that the court had no right to grant bail. Justice Hendrick, however, announced that he would liberate Thaw in $5,000 bail.

Thaw and his counsel then left for the sheriff's office, across the street, to fix up the bail bond. On his way from the courthouse Thaw was surrounded by a throng of men and women. Some of the women were crying.

All shouted:

"Stick to mother!"

"God bless you."

"Don't drink, keep away from Broadway."

"Stick to your home in Pittsburgh."

Thaw smiled at his admirers and waved the crowd away as he went into the sheriff's office.

EVELYN FEARS THAW MAY INJURE HER IF HE 'STARTS BOOZING'

MALONE, N. Y., July 16.—"The verdict of the Thaw jury will have no effect on my plans," said Evelyn Thaw in discussing Thaw's possible release, and added:

"I do not like the idea of Harry being granted his liberty, but I should dislike very much to learn that he was to be sent back to Matteawan, as that is an awful place."

Asked if she was afraid Thaw would harm her personally, she replied:

"One naturally fears for their own safety in such a case as this, and I am like other folks in that respect. I am not afraid of Harry when he is not drinking, but when he gets started drinking then he is apt to do most anything and I fear he would injure me if the chance presented itself."

She commented on Harry's proposed trip to Prince Rupert.

"Wait until he reaches the zone and gets a few drinks to him. Then there will be something doing that will make them think another earthquake has broken loose."

She then cited numerous incidents of escapades in which Thaw, she declared, had shown the characteristics of a man clearly out of his mind.

"As to my plans for the future, there is nothing definite in sight now. I have been offered contracts by several movie film companies, but I do not like any of which will come across with the most money. I intend to remain at Camp Jack until the latter part of September before signing up with any of the companies."

Lime and Tuberculosis

Dr. Roberts Bartholow, former professor of materia medica, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, says in his book Medical Uses of Lime, on pages 215 and 216: "Medical experience has shown that it (referring to a calcium salt) possesses the therapeutical property known as alterative, removes certain toxic or morbific materials and secures their secretion by the organs of elimination. * * * The testimony which has lately been published in regard to its curative powers in consumption is certainly very striking."

He does not refer to testimony regarding Seminal Alterative, since the publication never publicly recommends proprietary remedies. However, many cases of consumption seem to have yielded to this remedy.

This seems to be due largely to the fact that in Eckman's Alterative a calcium salt is so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person. It contains nothing that disorders nor habit-forming drugs, so is safe for children of all Blind Dog Stores and Druggists.

CHICOPEE MAN IS SUICIDE; CHUM IS MISSING

CHICOPEE, July 16.—William Grieves, who went away over the Fourth of July with his chum, Richard Thompson, and returned without committed suicide today, leaving notes which have aroused fear for Thompson, who has not come back.

One note read:

"Forgive me. I am not guilty."

The other was:

"If anything should happen, my love to my children."

Neither note was signed nor addressed. They were found on the bureau in Grieves' room at No. 160 Exchange street. Grieves was dead on the floor, his throat cut with his own razor. The police reported the case one of suicide.

Grieves was forty years old and had a wife and three children in Scotland. He had been here over a year.

Less is known of Richard Thompson, who had been here a few months. Grieves was an electrician and was employed with Thompson by the Delight Manufacturing Company. Both had lodgings at 159 Exchange street and had become so friendly that they were regarded as chums.

They arranged a trip for the double holiday over the Fourth. They went and Grieves was back at work on Tuesday, July 6, and back at his lodgings that night. Since then he has persisted apparently his usual routine.

Thompson did not return. This did not attract notice. But, when the police read Grieves' note about being "not guilty," they made inquiries.

When they learned that Thompson had not been at work or at his lodgings and that he had been expected back with Grieves, the police wondered if there was any connection between Grieves' suicide and the disappearance of Thompson.

Inquiry is being made for the missing chum.

U. S. TO REFUSE AUSTRIAN DEMAND

relations between the two countries.

The State Department has not made public the text of the Austrian note and will not do so until the reply is ready. The note already has been published abroad, however, the American government giving its consent on request from the Vienna foreign office.

It is understood the Austrian note admits the principle that arms may be sold by neutrals to belligerents, but claims the application of that principle is abnormal.

First, that the scale of the American industry is abnormal and does not fall within the spirit of the law, and,

Second, that the allies have prevented American trade in arms and ammunitions with other neutrals.

State Department officials do not see how this government can draw a line between what might be considered normal production and what Austria alleges is abnormal. They believe that the principle is admitted and the question of degree is irrelevant.

The second point is regarded by officials as an extremely knotty problem.

GERMAN NEWSPAPERS APPROVE AUSTRIAN REQUEST TO THE U. S.

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, July 16.—(By wireless.)—German newspapers express full approval of the Austrian note to the United States protesting against the shipment of war munitions to the allies. In political circles the note is taken to indicate that Germany has Austria's complete moral support in the negotiations with President Wilson upon the matter of submarine warfare in the waters around the British Isles.

The Overseas News Agency, through which the opinion of the government is usually voiced, calls the Austrian note testimony of "good will and shrewd political judgment."

"It is to be hoped that this strong argument in favor of absolute neutrality on the part of the United States will impress and convert President Wilson just as it did Secretary of State Bryan," says the Vossische Zeitung. "Now is the golden opportunity for America to show her readiness to observe true neutrality in spirit."

However, the Vossische Zeitung says it is skeptical about the results of the note.

GERMANS CLAIM GAINS EAST AND WEST

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, July 16.—Further progress for the Germans in Poland and the repulse of French attacks in the Western theatre of war are reported in an official statement issued by the General Staff today.

German Landwehr regiments in bitter hand-to-hand fighting in the western part of the Argonne captured 462 French prisoners. Admission is made that the Germans lost a trench section south of Souchez.

Denial is made, however, of French claims of successes in the Argonne on the 14th and 15th. It is announced that all French attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

Gerardmer, in the Vosges, which is held by the French, has been bombarded by German aviators.

CROSS WINDAU RIVER.

In the Eastern theatre of war the Germans have crossed the Windau River north of Kokeljany. Southeast of Kolno and south of Prasnysz the German troops of Gen. Field Marshal Hindenburg have made further progress. The text of the official report follows:

"Western theatre: We lost a trench section south of the Souchez cemetery. Repeated attempts of the French to wrest from us the positions we had captured in the Argonne failed, and the positions were firmly held by us.

"All French attacks delivered on the 14th and 15 th to the west of Argonne failed in the face of the brave defence of the North German landwehr regiments that inflicted extremely sanguinary losses on the enemy in bitter hand-to-hand fighting and captured 462 prisoners.

"Since June 20 our troops have fought continually and with success to gain further territory and war booty in the western Argonne.

TAKE 7,000 PRISONERS.

"Up to the present we have taken in that region 7125 French prisoners, of whom 116 were officers. On our front immediately east of the Argonne an attack of the enemy was repulsed after a lively artillery duel.

"In the neighborhood of Lentrey, east of Luneville, there have been outpost fights.

"Our aviators dropped bombs upon the enemy troops holding Gerardmer.

"Eastern theatre: Russian troops have crossed the Windau River north of Kokljany and advanced in an easterly direction. Southeast of Kolno and south of Prasnysz we have made further progress. Violently and strenuously against the Russians, who attempted to stem our advance.

"Southeastern theatre—The situation as regards the German troops is unchanged."

Boston Harbor and Whole Bay in Fog Blanket

The principal scenery around Boston Harbor today was fog.

A thick blanket of fog screened Massachusetts Bay and Vineyard Sound yesterday. This blanket unrolled itself into the harbor through the night. The sun probably rose as usual, but this only made the fog seem heavier. The view limit from any of the waterfronts was about 100 feet.

Ferryboats crept to and fro cautiously, blowing whistles. Fog bells on the ferry slips were tolled to guide the helmsmen.

The few tugs that moved about did so at reduced speed. Nothing moved that did not have to. Incoming coastwise steamers from Maine and the South were late.

The fog rolled up over the dock stringers and across Atlantic avenue and other waterfront streets, so that store lights were used and early street traffic made haste slowly.

Malden Mayor Denies Race Discrimination

William H. Blakeley, Mayor of Malden, denied in a petition filed in the Supreme Court today that he showed race discrimination in refusing to sign the license for the New Lanson Company to operate a restaurant, declaring his action was based on a belief that a license to the place would be detrimental to the public welfare. The company charged that Mayor Blakeley refused to sign the license unless the company agreed not to employ Chinamen. The Malden aldermen have approved the license which the Mayor declines to sign. The question is court is upon his right to refuse.

Police Baffled in "Pearce" Letter Hunt

NEW ORLEANS, July 16.—Police officials admitted today that they had been completely baffled in their search for the writer of the letters signed "Pearce" in which warning was given of attempts to blow up British steamers. Two more letters have been received since the arrest of Hans Haile on suspicion he has now been released. The belief is growing that the letters were written by a "crank" who had no basis for his wild statements.

Obstructed Sidewalk.

Vincenzo Marsella of Everett street, East Boston, was in court today, charged with obstructing the sidewalk on Everett street without a permit. He was fined $5 and paid.

GUARD BARNS IN PROVIDENCE CAR STRIKE

and the experience of the employes of the Bay State roads with their arbitration award in Boston is given as the reason for this distrust.

During the first day's hostilities one conductor was pulled off his car on the Arlington line and severely beaten. Several cars were hurled at cars, and in some places trolley wires were cut down. There was no serious outbreak, however.

In Pawtucket but two cars were run all day. There, too, Bitsey made a harvest. Cars coming from Attleboro stopped at the State line. In Woonsocket but one car was run all day, making several trips. The crew consisted of two starters. One other starter, Edward J. Cofield, was also charged immediately on his refusal to take out a car as motorman.

The first arrests were made late last night in Cranston and Providence. Elton Sleck, conductor, and Frank Lombardi were arrested. They were arraigned at a special session of the Sixth District Court. Sleck charged with obstructing a car by driving a team in front of cars, and Lombardi with assault in hitting a strikebreaker with a stone.

Dorchester Woman Suicide at Franklin

FRANKLIN, July 16.—Mrs. Maurice Baker, wife of a Dorchester carpenter, ended her life today by hanging herself to an apple tree in Jacob Lagsdin's orchard. It was not until farmhands became curious at seeing her as they supposed, standing in the same position for so long a time that they investigated. She had tied a rope around her neck and after reling a stone beneath the tree tied the other end of the rope to a limb. She then kicked the stone away. Her toes still touched the ground and from a distance she appeared to be standing.

Court Hears Row on Peabody Antiques

Henry W. Longfellow, a builder, asked the Superior Court of Suffolk County today to compel William Cullinan of Beverly to give him certain fixtures which were in a dining room of the Peabody estate in Beverly. He claims that he purchased the antiques from Francis H. Swift, who was an agent of Cullivan.

MRS. COWLES IN MOVE TO WIN CHILDREN

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 16.—Mrs. Florence Jacquith Cowles, who is suing Dr. Edward J. Cowles for divorce, has made a motion asking that she be given permanent custody of her two children, Marion and Virginia, aged four and five. This motion supplements the injunction granted her last February, restraining her husband from interfering with her personal liberty.

Mrs. Cowles in her divorce suit alleges misconduct by the doctor and names Miss Ally Anita, a nurse employed by him in his sanatorium. Mrs. Cowles also claims she was forced by her husband to associate with lunatics.

Mrs. Cowles was Miss Jacquith of Boston and Brookline.

The case is expected to come up for trial in October, before Chief Justice Robert G. Pike. Meanwhile Mrs. Cowles is living with her father in Brookline.

SOCIETY PLANS TO MAKE FARMERS OF UNEMPLOYED

NEW YORK, July 16.—To assist in the relief of unemployment and vocational dissatisfaction in the cities of the country, a national agricultural organization was recently formed. It is an extension of the Back to the Land Departments of Agriculture and has headquarters at the Labor Temple, this city.

A woman is at the head of the Forward-to-the-Land League, as it is called, Mrs. Haviland H. Lund. She hopes to establish a series of small farm communities, and has taken the matter up with officials of the Agriculture, Labor and Interior Departments, and the Reclamation Service. Assistant Secretary Vrooman of the Agricultural Department is greatly interested in Mrs. Lund's scheme, and has given her valuable assistance.

"The deep human wish for a home and the present conditions of congestion, unemployment and fierce competition are turning the city man's thought toward the country," said Mrs. Lund today. "To make the urbanite happy and to supply correct land information and to give lectures and addresses to the prospective farmer are the chief objects of the League.

"You can't put city people into the country without teaching them something about it. So we will conduct classes for the prospective farmers. There is one now in New York city. The Smith Labor Bill has made possible the country demonstrator, who advises scientifically on farming problems."

Mrs. Haviland H. Lund, head of the Forward-to-the-Land League, organized to further an agricultural movement as relief for unemployment.

PIUTE, YIELDED TO SCOTT, FREED

DENVER, Col., July 16.—Tse-Ne-Gat, the Piute Indian accused of murder who held off a sheriff's posse for two weeks, finally surrendering on the personal appeal of Brigadier-General Hugh L. Scott, has been acquitted.

Tse-Ne-Gat was charged with killing Juan Chacon, a Mexican sheep herder, in southwestern Colorado.

Brigadier-General Hugh L. Scott, who is chief of staff of the United States army, traversed wild mountain trails in Utah on horseback to find Tse-Ne-Gat. He was notified at Washington of the acquittal and expressed keen gratification.

"I am very glad that Tse-Ne-Gat had justice," said General Scott. "I always have contended that he was innocent."

The general added that he was pleased with the conduct of authorities here who interested themselves to see that the Indian had a fair trial.

SAYS HUSBAND THREATENED HEARSE RIDE

NEW BEDFORD, July 16.—The trial of Mrs. Leopoldina Jean's suit for $20,000 for separate maintenance against her husband, John B. Jean, was resumed today.

She claims her husband was cruel, once threatening to give her a ride in a hearse. He was formally an undertaker.

Mrs. Jean's attorney is former Mayor John P. Coughlin of Fall River. Mr. Jean is now head of the North End Loan Association, the New Bedford Loan Association and several other enterprises. According to the testimony of Mrs. Jean he is worth from $75,000 to $100,000.

Mrs. Jean charges unreasonable jealousy, habitual intoxication and cruelty. She recited several alleged instances of her husband's coming home in a state of intoxication while they were living on the West farm at Lund Corner, and of his striking and otherwise abusing her. Mrs. Jean said that on one occasion he beat her cruelly, causing her two daughters to faint.

At the time of the final separation, Mrs. Jean testified, her husband had three physicians at the house, ready to examine her, in an effort to have her declared insane and committed to an asylum. Mrs. Jean testified:

"He tried to drag me back into the house, and looking back I saw two doctors at the window waiting. I told him, 'You sent your sons away to the insane asylum, but you can't do it to me.'" Mrs. Jean further charged that her husband had refused to provide for her and that although he owned several automobiles she had been for some time obliged to ride on the street cars.

Mrs. Jean also testified: "Just before I left my husband he threatened to give me a ride in Chausse's hearse. This was after he had knocked me down, bending my back over a radiator, and making me lame for a week. Another time when I was suffering from rheumatism my husband refused to permit the janitor to light the fire and I was obliged to have a gas heater brought to my room."

In cross-examination Mrs. Jean said that most of the trouble was caused through differences about property and money affairs.

Women's Freak Shoes Frowned On by Experts

NEW YORK, July 16.—Freak styles in women's shoes are not "The Thing." So much was officially decided at a meeting of the National Association of Shoe Retailers and Wholesalers and the National Last Association here.

Odd-colored shoes in ing at the back and sides are no longer to be manufactured; or at least their manufacture was disapproved. It was agreed to return to conservative lines.

Women's shoes for ordinary wear will be black with cloth uppers, and to be proper the cloth must also be black. Perforations and other decorations were frowned upon.

Men's shoes are to remain conservative in design and either black or tan.

MISS SPARHAWK SUES FOR $20,000

Miss Frances Campbell Sparhawk, the author, has brought a $20,000 damage suit against Edwin A. Graves, owner of a hotel at No. 164 Strathmore road, where she formerly lived.

Miss Sparhawk has written "Senator Intrigue," "A Wedding Tangle," "Dorothy's School Days" and a whole series of "Dorothy" books, a "Life of Lincoln for Boys," numerous Indian stories and other works.

She alleges in her suit that she sustained a broken leg and other injuries by falling into an open elevator which she claims was out of order.

The accident happened two or three months ago, and Miss Sparhawk was taken to the City Hospital. Her attorney, J. Winthrop Pickering, has attached the property of Mr. Graves for the full $20,000.

High Living for War Aliens Here Is U. S. Charity

Large numbers of aliens of both sexes are held here by the United States government, which, although they are classed as undesirable, will not export them because of the fear of submarines.

They are enjoying high living at the Long wharf station.

Electric flatirons have been installed in the women's quarters and a $2,000 sterilizing plant has been established. This is said to be the most complete of any in use at any government station, with the possible exception of Ellis Island.

Daily picnics at one of the harbor islands will be started within a few days, it is expected, by immigration officials.

BRIDGEPORT ARMS MAKERS EXPECTED TO VOTE FOR STRIKE

By International News Service.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., July 16.—With officials of the Remington Arms and Ammunition Company admitting that the construction work on the new plant is now at a standstill, the crisis threatening the local ordinance manufacturers is due this afternoon when the machinists are expected to vote for a strike.

By Monday it is predicted all of the 20,000 workmen employed in Bridgeport arms factory will be out. Wages and working hours do not enter into the question so far as the machinists are concerned—only whether millwrights should be classed as carpenters or machinists.

BLAMES THE GERMANS.

In the meantime, all manufacturers who anticipate trouble in their respective plants are making feverish preparations to be able to meet it when it comes.

The Remington U. M. C. Co. has already erected two miles of electric light poles on the west side of its plant to afford better illumination for the approaches to the company's property.

John M. French, publicity agent for the Remington Arms and Ammunition Company, makes the following statement:

"Our company is positive that German influence and money may be blamed for this situation. It is hard to conceive that any other cause would incite union labor to walk out of a job where they are being paid the highest wages asked by their unions, granted union hours and given every other concession they sought.

TROUBLE MAY SPREAD.

"We cannot place the finger of responsibility in any certain direction, but no other construction can be placed on the action of the unions under the circumstances knowing as we do that this is the only element that will be desirous of having the output of munitions factories stopped."

Starting among a mere handful of millwrights in the Remington plant, the trouble may spread eventually to every one of the 236 factories in the city, it is said.

BRIDGEPORT ARMS STRIKE THREATENS TO SPREAD TO BOSTON

Spread of the labor crisis in Bridgeport, Conn., where jurisdictional disputes between labor unions have checked enlargement or arms factories and the erection of new arms factories, is threatened today to include Boston and eventually all New England.

Action in Boston is withheld only until after the meeting of the organizing committee of the Machinists' Union Lodge 264, to be held in Wells Memorial Building, Monday night, to take action on the fight with the carpenters' union.

That sub of the situation is in the employment of carpenters, at the union carpenter wage, to install machinery in factories, work which the machinists claim is theirs at their rates, which are considerably higher than the carpenters.

To add to the troubles of the allies in this country in furnishing ammunition, arms and explosives, protests are being made in Woburn and Everett against the proposed construction of explosives factories in those places. In Everett one big shoe manufacturer threatened to move his plant to some other city in case a permit is granted to a bensol company to manufacture explosives near him.

$18,000,000 Arms Order for Lowell

LOWELL, July 16.—To make provision for handling an $18,000,000 war order for cartridges for one of the Entente powers, the United States Cartridge Company of this city plans practically to double the plant within the next few months.

Il Passo Strategico di Falsarego Conquistato Dagli Alpini

Il Libro Rosso Austriaco

Il Governo Austriaco ha dato al pubblico il Libro Rosso che riguarderà le cagioni gli atti belligeranti di violazione delle leggi di guerra. Collaborato da molte deposizioni giurate, esso dice che i Consoli austriaci furono indegnamente trattati prima che la guerra fosse scoppiata, che donne, vecchi e bambini furono arrestati, e che i Montenegrini ed i Serbi violano i più elementari principii delle leggi di guerra.

Riguardo all'Italia, l'Austria asserisce che la sua ex alleata fu informata ripetutamente dei suoi rappresentanti sulle intenzioni e sugli armamenti dell'Austria, e che le precise violazioni della Triplice Alleanza furono approvate dall'Italia.

In Italia, il Libro Rosso è stato aspramente commentato. La Stampa ed i circoli politici dicono che esso è la distorsione della verità, in parte completamente e falso o ipocrisia interpretato erroneamente.

RICHARDANO DOBERNO.

Un telegramma da Vienna, da fonte Austriaca, asserisce che gli attacchi violentissimi di artiglieria e di fanteria che gli Italiani han fatto sull'altipiano di Dobero, sono stati respinti con gravi perdite.

Prisoners Tell How Holt Dived to Death in Prison

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., July 16.—As a result of questioning Nassau County prisoners, Assistant District Attorneys Weeks and Woods have been convinced that Frank Holt committed suicide by falling from a height in the jail and not by any other means.

This information was placed before the district attorney. The inquest may go on tomorrow.

Antonio Pelegrino, who occupied a cell above Holt's, said that although he could not see Holt make his escape from his cell, he could distinctly hear him climb up the iron grating. When he reached a certain point his climbing ceased and the next moment groans followed, when a body fell to the floor.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Thirteen Americans are among the 244 on the Baltic, which has just left this port with 15,000 tons of war cargo, including munitions, auto trucks and aeroplanes.

The White Star line announced today that it would exclude the friends of passengers from departing ships hereafter until further notice. The French and several other lines have been enforcing this rule for several weeks.

Ferdinand Dreyfus Dead.

PARIS, July 16.—Senator Ferdinand Dreyfus, member of important committees of the French upper House and a writer on economic and social questions, is dead here today.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF

If you are losing your hearing—if you are troubled with buzzing and ringing in the ears—if you find that your nostrils are clogged—if you hawk and spit in the morning—if you have given up hopes of finding relief, just go to Riker-Jaynes, or any other drug store, and purchase one ounce of Fluid Ensenol.* Mix this with one pint of warm water. Put two drops in the affected ear every night. Put one tablespoonful in a fourth of a glass of warm water and gargle throat and snuff up nose night and morning. Keep this up for a few weeks and test your hearing and you will be pleased to note the improvement. You will also, no doubt, discover that your catarrh has disappeared and head noises gone.

U. S. Chemists Combat Poison Gas for Allies

CINCINNATI, July 16.—William and A. C. Roach, brother chemists here, claim to have invented a successful means to combat the poison gas used by the Germans.

"We are negotiating with an agent of the allies in Washington and he has informed us that he heartily approves our invention. We are arranging to go to Washington for a demonstration and will carry our proposition directly to the French War Office at Paris, and also to Rome," said Al Roach today.

When asked why he did not give his information to the United States government, Roach said that he had already submitted to this government an important discovery as to the use of incendiary shells and illuminating devices for night attacks and had received scant courtesy.

BRITAIN TO LIMIT NEUTRAL COTTON

LONDON, July 16.—Because of fear that cotton may be used in the manufacture of munitions and uniforms for Germany, the British government hopes very shortly to limit the export of cotton to neutral countries to the precise amount of actual need.

The Marquis of Crewe, lord president of the Council and Liberal leader in the House of Lords, made an announcement to this effect in the upper House.

The Marquis of Crewe's statement was made in reply to a series of questions by Baron Charnwood regarding the supply of cotton and other material through neutral countries to Germany, and whether the government had found that the measures taken since March last were effective.

The real question, he thought, was whether it was advisable to add cotton to the contraband list.

BOSTON MAN HAD SURELY SUFFERED

James Stevens of 86 Eustis Street Is Relating Story to His Friends.

When a patient says "My food does not agree with me; it sours on my stomach; I have no appetite and I have to be very careful what I eat," it is apparent the bulk of the suffering is upon the stomach, for it is in active sympathy with the brain and nervous system and may produce nervous prostration, gloomy forebodings, nightmare, sleeplessness, as well as many other indications of a breaking down of the general health.

Plant Juice is giving wonderful results to thousands of sufferers of stomach, liver and kidney trouble. Many people call daily at the Plant Juice headquarters, at Liggett's drug store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, out of gratitude, to thank the representative for what this medicine has done for them. The following statement was recently made by Mr. James Stevens, who resides at No. 86 Eustis Street, Roxbury, and who is a well-known and popular salesman. He stated:

"I had suffered all my life with my stomach, indigestion and dyspepsia. I was told by specialists on the stomach that I had only a few months to live. My food would ferment in my stomach, causing gases to form, and I was always very much bloated. My head aches, dizzy spells and my tongue was always coated. I was also troubled more or less with rheumatic pains, and my limbs would swell to an enormous size. I have taken all kinds of remedies, and consulted many doctors, but nothing seemed to help me. I had been reading in the daily papers about the cures which were being effected by the remedy Plant Juice, and although skeptical, I thought I would try it. I have taken only three bottles and I can say any kind of food will do me; experience that distressed, bloated feeling that I formerly had after meals has disappeared, and the pain of my limbs has also gone. I am not nervous or restless, and sleep fine at night. Plant Juice has done a lot of good for me, and I am telling all my friends about it."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett drug store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he daily meets he local public and interviewers and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Advertisement.

RUSSIA ADMITS CAPTURE OF PRZASNYSZ

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, July 16.—Russian War Office officials today admitted the loss of Przasnysz to the Germans, but asserted that its capture would be of no strategic advantage to the Kaiser's forces, the town having been practically destroyed by artillery fire.

The Germans have apparently pressed on from Przasnysz, however, the latest official reports from the front telling of fighting south of that town in which the Russians repelled numerous German attacks.

German attacks are also in progress in the direction of Lomza, the Narew River fortress east-northeast of Przasnysz, and Pultusk form the Narew defences of Warsaw.

To prevent the massing of immense Russian forces in northern Poland, where the Germans are now concentrating their attack, the Czar's troops have resumed their offensive in the Shavli and Niemen districts, and the Austrians on the Dniester River are again making attacks in force.

EMPEROR IN POLAND.

Emperor William is reported to be with the German troops in northern Poland. His headquarters are said to be at Thorn, from which he travels to various points on the front by motor.

Grand Duke Michael, brother of the Czar, arrived here today after a tour of inspection along the southern front. He said to the International News Service correspondent:

"The Germans' plans have been ruined. Whatever success they gain hereafter cannot delay the final catastrophe which will overtake them.

"The blow at Warsaw from the north is only a desperate effort to snatch victory from defeat. Like its assaults from the west and south it is doomed to result in failure."

A German aeroplane was brought down by Russian artillery, at Ostrolenka on Wednesday. The pilot and aviator whom it carried were both captured. Before it was forced to descend it dropped several bombs on Ostrolenka, but none of them caused any material damage.

CAVALRY CHECKS ATTACK.

The latest report from Grand Duke Nicholas received shortly after mid night today says:

"The enemy, having received reinforcements in the region of Riga and Smilli, began on July 13 an advance from Hacenpel on Goldingen and the sector of Shrunden and Popelary. Our cavalry outposts are holding the enemy in check at the crossings of the Windau and Venta Rivers as well as elsewhere.

"On the Niemen front there was artillery and rifle fire on Wednesday along a broad front, but we easily repulsed the attacks of small infantry forces. Enemy attacks in the direction of Lomza were also repulsed.

"On the right bank of the Pissa and on both banks of the Skwa there is no change in the situation. Between the Orzyc and the Wkra, on the new front south of Przasnys numerous attacks by the enemy were repulsed. He captured a few trenches, but was unable to renew his assaults on Thursday.

REPULSE ALL ATTACKS.

"On the Bug and Zlota Lipa the fighting has been of no significance. Between the Vistula and the Bug the enemy made several attacks, but all were repulsed.

"On Tuesday the Austrians took the offensive on the Dniester River in the Niezwiska-Okna district. They attacked our bridgeheads on the right bank of the river in the region of Konishavtz, Zhoshawa, Kostelniki and Sinkow.

"Our artillery bombarded the enemy successfully and most of his attempts to cross were abandoned. The fighting continues between the enemy forces that forced a crossing and our troops."

An official report from Caucasus headquarters states that after a two-day battle the Russians captured strong Turkish positions in the Olty district. Four guns were also taken.

Delay Opening Bids for New Submarines

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The United States may have among its new submarines, some boats modelled on those which have proved successful in the war.

Bids for sixteen new submarines authorized by the last Congress will not be opened until September 29, Secretary Daniels has announced, in order that two shipbuilding companies which have obtained patent rights to build boats of a successful type now used by two or more of the European belligerents may have a chance to compete.

Mr. Daniels acted, it is understood, upon the strong recommendation of his advisory council. It was urged that not only was it desirable that the two big concerns involved, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company and the New York Shipbuilding Company, be added to the American concerns ready to furnish submarines but also that information as to the European under-sea boats would be particularly valuable in view of the contemplated expansion of that branch of the navy.

The companies obtained the right to build the European submarine know as the Hay-denny type some time ago, but interrupted communication with Europe, due to the war, made it impossible for them to get data on which to submit bids on August 2, the date originally set for the opening of bids.

Secretary Daniels said the department was glad to see large shipbuilding companies entering the submarine field. Heretofore competition has been chiefly between smaller concerns, he said, and the time required for construction, limited to a maximum of two years by the contracts, had seemed excessive.

The new vessels will be similar in size to the L type boats now in commission.

Says Germany Won't Urge Austrian Plea

By International News Service.

AMSTERDAM, July 16.—"Germany will not insist too much upon the observance of the conditions of the Austrian note protesting against the shipment of war munitions from the United States to England and France," says the Gazette de Hollande in commenting upon the document.

"During the Spanish-American war Germany furnished Spain with war supplies, consequently she considers it safer to let Austria take decisive steps alone."

C. H. Hood of this city, president of H. P. FRENCH RETAKE HILL NO. 285 IN ARGONNE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, July 16.—Hill No. 285, one of the dominant positions in the Argonne recently won by the army of Crown Prince Frederick William, has been recaptured by the French, the War Office announced today. For three days the opposing German and French forces have been engaged in a hand-to-hand battle for the height.

It is understood that the French commander in the Argonne had been ordered by General Joffre to retake the hill "At any cost." It formed the key to the French position in that region, and while the Germans held it they menaced the western defences of Verdun.

The War Office communique, issued this afternoon, also announces the repulse of very heavy attacks by the Germans near Leintrey, in the Vosges. The enemy made his assaults in this region on a front of three kilometres, almost two miles. In driving back the Germans the French inflicted heavy losses.

FOUGHT WITH GERMANS.

The text of the communique follows:

"In the region to the north of Arras forces of the enemy which attempted during the night to sortie from the trenches to the south of Chateau de Carleul were immediately checked by the fire of our infantry and our artillery.

"In the Argonne our curtains of fire prevented the enemy from making any attack whatever.

"Between the Muse and Moselle there was action during the night, but no infantry action took place. There was a bombardment at the Bonvaux ravine, fighting with grenades in the Ailly forest, and a cannonade to the north of Flirey.

ENEMY ATTACKS REPULSED.

"In Lorraine the Germans attacked on a front of three kilometres the positions which they had lost near Leintrey. At the same time they bombarded all of our line from the Champenoux forest as far as La Vezouse. The infantry attacks were repulsed everywhere.

"Near Leintrey, after having gained a foothold in a group of our defences, the enemy's forces were immediately driven out by a counter attack.

"In the region southeast of the forest of Parroy the assailing troops reached our barbed wire entanglements but were dispersed by our fire and left in our hands a few prisoners.

"The losses of the enemy appeared to be considerable."

FALZARGO PASS CAPTURED BY ITALIANS

By BRISTON D'ALLAIRE, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, July 16.—Battling nearly 7,000 feet above the sea level, a detachment of gallant Italian Alpine troops has surprised the Austrians holding the summit of Falzarco Pass, a supposedly impreanable position, and captured it. This information is contained in an official statement given out by the Italian general staff.

Falzago Pass is a position of the greatest strategical importance and lies in the Tyrolese Alps between six and seven miles west of Co. tina d'ampezzo. The summit lies 6,954 feet above the sea level. To the southwest appears the snow-covered Marmolata, with the distant Pala Di San Martino and the Civetta to the left; in the foreground to the right is the Col di Lana. Falzargo Pass has long been a favorite spot for tourists in the Tyrolese Alps on account of the ruggedness of the scenery.

SHARP FIGHTING IN TYROL.

The text of the general staff's statement follows:

"A detachment of our infantry succeeded in escalating the slopes of a ravine heretofore considered inaccessible, and occupied by a surprise attack the summit of Falzargo pass. On the night of July 13-14 this detachment was counterattacked by the Austrians, but the enemy was repulsed, sustaining serious losses."

It is reported from Bologne, the headquarters of the General Staff, that both infantry fighting and artillery duels are in progress on the Tyrolese frontier.

Premier Salandra left Rome for the front last night to hold a conference with King Victor Emmanuel.

The newspaper Idea Nazionale states that negotiations for a final agreement between Bulgaria and Roumania are taking place here. Mr. Stancheloff, the Bulgarian minister to Italy, is holding daily conferences with Prince Ghika, the Roumanian envoy.

FAMINE IN TRIESTE.

The Austrian port city of Trieste, against which the Italian army on the Isonzo river front is driving, is held at the mercy of mobs and the people are famine stricken, according to Miss Emily Bertin, a refugee, who was interviewed by the Verona correspondent of the Idea Nazionale.

All these sections of the Trieste harbor have been mined and guns have been mounted on the huge 1,200 yard breakwater. High angle guns have been mounted upon Mt. Kalk which is now the site of the barracks to protect the city against Italian torpedoes.

The Austrians are fearful lest the cathedral be damaged by shells or bombs. This is a very historic building, the erection of which was begun five centuries ago. It is built upon the site of a Roman temple, and in the chapel of San Carlo are buried all the Spanish Bourbons.

'Affinity' Earle in Seclusion, Hopes for Peace

By International News Service.

STAMFORD, N. Y., July 16.—Ferdinand Pinney Earle, the man of many wives, who is now living with his fourth wife considers his troubles nearly over. Seated on the veranda of his cottage here he told here he hopes to drop out of the public eye in a very few months.

He has found at last the seclusion he desires. No passers by stop to point out the target area near the shore and none of the neighbors pretend any interest in his movements. His only comment ventured in how closely the artist keeps to himself. He is as secluded as if he were in Europe.

"Yes, I am sure," friends now, he said. "and all I want is to be left alone. After all my troubles I at last see smooth water ahead, and after some matters concerning my children are settled I shall be through with unwelcome notoriety."

'Red Book' Called Failure by Italy

By International News Service

ROME, July—16—"Austria's efforts to press bad faith on the part of Italy is a complete failure," says the Tribune today in commenting upon the Red Book, issued in Vienna. "The Austrian government intended the 'Red Book' for a double purpose.

1—To show that Italy had acted in a dishonorable way toward her colleagues in the Triple Alliance and to uphold Austria's acts.

2—To prove that the allies especially the Servians, had been guilty of atrocities upon soldiers of the Teuton armies.

The Tribune, in continuation, says: "The documents in the Red Book show that Germany shared fully Italy's viewpoint concerning the interpretations of article 7 in the pact of the Triple Alliance. At the same time the book makes plain the sheer slightedness of the Austrian bureaucracy and its deep-rooted belief that Italy was 'bluffing.'"

It was the usual case of Austria counting chickens too late."

The Giornale d'Italia declares that Austria knew that a declaration of war against Servia meant the end of the treaty of the Triple Alliance. Austria evidently expected a rapid victory at the beginning of the war, hence her delaying negotiations. The "Red Book," the Giornale d'Italia says, was undoubtedly intended for home consumption.

British Victory in Africa Reported

FRESH BRITISH SUCCESSES ON GALLIPOLI

By International News Service.

MITYLENE, via Athens, July 16.—British reinforcements are reported to have been landed upon the northern shores of the Gallipoli peninsula and are now within three hours' march of the town of Gallipoli, at the entrance of the Sea of Marmora, according to word received here today.

Turkish losses in the past six days' fighting at the Dardanelles are estimated at 25,000 men.

The Anglo-French fleet has redoubled its fire and the land batteries of the allies have been advanced. The allies in their latest successful drive on the southern tip of the peninsula captured much war material.

The fighting on the Gallipoli peninsula continued with unparalleled ferocity, both by day and by night. The Turks were subjected to a most terrific bombardment by the allied fleet and were compelled to surrender three lines of trenches to the British at Durka Tepe.

In the section of Krithia the French are advancing against the main positions of the Turks, being supported by the heaviest artillery of the Anglo-French batteries. Prisoners state that the morale of the Turkish army has been shaken by the furious attacks and the violent bombardment of the allies.

An official Constantinople dispatch says that hostile torpedo boats and transports attempting to approach Avi Burnu, on Gallipoli peninsula, on Wednesday, were forced by the Turkish artillery to withdraw. The Turkish shells sank one launch and set fire to another.

The official statement says that an artillery duel is in progress on Gallipoli peninsula.

CELESTIA then began to develop strength in the newspapers. She was to develop so much before her course was run as is hardly believable. Already the idea of changing our government was no longer a news headline, but a definite and by no means unconfortable thought in minds of men.

Some newspapers detested the thought because it was new; others welcomed and embraced it because it was new. Still others, and in the end these became her most powerful supporters, took some such attitude as this:

"You may argue for the new gospel; you may argue against it. You may call it treason; you may call it progress; but when all is said and done, certain facts will shine out clear as crystal.

"As people we ought to be happy; we are not. Millions who ought to be clean and healthy are dirty and sick. There is enough money for everybody. A very small portion of this is in the hands of the efficient few; the rest is nowhere, being lost, wasted, thrown overboard.

"In those whom we elect to high office two qualities only seem necessary—inefficiency and selfishness.

"What are we going to do about it?"

A certain scientific person (of fiction) having constructed a very large monster in the image of man, brought it to life—and it got away from him and raised all kinds of Cain.

Celestia was no Frankenstein; but Professor Stilliter no longer found in her the apt and docile pupil of earlier days. He found it harder and harder to control her. More and more she thought for herself. The reason for this failure in his power over her was not far to seek.

He loved her with a love that he found daily more difficult to keep in bounds. To control another person's mind great concentration is necessary. Now, the state of love makes it almost impossible to concentrate upon any other state. So when Professor Stilliter would be trying to will Celestia—to say precisely so and so to an audience, the half of his mind would be concentrated upon her beauty (joyously), upon her desirability (gloatingly), upon his love for her (ardently), and upon her dislike for him (with fury and hatred of those whom she liked much).

Consequently, she didn't always say or do precisely what he willed her to say and do. Still, she had been under his sway for so many years that it was only natural for her to think upon as many subjects as he thought. And indeed Celestia's oratory was finer on the new basis for self-initiative, and she had more power on the minds of those who listened to her.

If Stilliter could have been entirely eliminated from her life, her life at least for a time must have gone on very much as it was going on. She believed that she came from heaven, and that she had come to make the world better, safer to live in, cleaner and happier.

Tommy argued with her so incessantly and often so intolerantly that if she hadn't been in love with the mere sound of his voice she couldn't have stood it.

Celestia Was Telling Stories to a Little Child in the Camp

Late one afternoon she came home to her little city of tents, very tired, and lay down in a hammock under a shady tree to rest. In spite of her celestial origin, Celestia was very human, and just as attractive to a sticky house fly as any other human being.

Such a house fly made a dead set for her, and she found it impossible to rest. She went into the headquarters tent, which was the biggest and coolest, and the day's work being over and the secretaries gone, tried to rest there. And couldn't. She was tired and discouraged.

She was tired because she had been doing too much, and she was discouraged because she was tired. Tommy had an uncanny faculty for dropping in upon her when she was in those moods. Possibly Freddie the Ferret had something to do with this faculty, for he worshiped Tommy.

Be that as it may, Freddie was about the tents when Celestia came in tired. He vanished presently, and a little later Tommy appeared, looking very brown and manly and refreshing.

Celestia heard his voice and called out to him, a little petulantly, perhaps. Tommy poked his head in through the door of the big tent and greeted her loudly and joyously. He found her telling stories to a child of the camp, but the moment she saw him she put the child down and greeted him cordially.

Meanwhile Professor Stilliter, in his tent, reading a deep and thick book on "The Psychology of Government," heard the two voices—and couldn't read another word.

"Celestia," said Tommy, "you look so little and helpless and unprotected, curled among those curtains, that I'm tempted to pick you up, put you in my pocket and take you somewhere where you can't get into any more mischief."

"I dare you to try!" exclaimed Celestia.

Then they both laughed, and Tommy advanced into the tent.

So much articulate speech Professor Stilliter overheard, but no more. After that there ensue to him only the murmurs of one voice or the other, sounds which to a jealous man were more provocative of impotent rage than actual words would have been.

He stared at the book, in which he was no longer able to read a word, and "cut his heart out," as the saying is.

"One of these days," he thought, "she'll say 'yes' to that meddling fool and leave all my fine schemes high and dry. If I really do think it, I'd—I'd"——

Now the professor took off his eyeglasses and thought very hard indeed and looked very horrid and blind and evil. Every now and then he murmured to himself: "My God, why not?"

"So you dare me to try, do you?" said Tommy.

Her eyes sparkled now; she was feeling very much rested.

"Yes, I do."

Quick as any cat the young man leaned over and picked her up from the midst of the curtains as easily as if she had been a kitten, and so held her almost at the level of his chin. And now Celestia felt completely refreshed. It was as if she had received refreshing strength from Tommy's strong arms.

A Fictionless Fable

By ANN LISLE

THERE was once a girl who didn't like to wait for things.

She was perfectly amiable and sweet, even in the face of difficulties—only she liked to be quite sure whether difficulty or easy-going security was to be her portion.

When in doubt she always had to do something. She never could wait for circumstances to adjust themselves, and for things to work out. If some one promised her the loan of a new book at 4 o'clock on Friday, and it hadn't arrived at 5, she promptly sat down and wrote a sarcastic note about "people who couldn't keep their promises."

If a friend invited her to meet him for lunch at 1 o'clock, and he wasn't there by 1:10, she had arrived at a state of nervous tension that made the white meat of a roving chicken seem highly indigestible.

Everyone said "Leonie is a lovely girl—but so impatient and exacting. Well, that's her only fault—so there's no harm in catering to her." And most of Leonie's friends trained themselves not to produce mental indigestion in her nature.

Then she met a man who was always on time. If he told her to be at the corner of Dartmouth street and Boylston street at five minutes to 2, Leonie arriving at 1:57, found him white and nervous and pacing the confines of the Public Library sidewalk as if it were a prison. That should have made her very happy—but strange to relate it got on her nerves frightfully to find William always in waiting for her exactly as she had been for other people.

She wasn't quite sure whether promptness was a virtue—or a very tiresome weakness of a petty mind, and she threw over the man who was prepared to give her the calm certainty for which she had always pined.

At that juncture Leonie met "The Man." The first evening that he came to call at her house he arrived at 9:35, breathless, but not at all apologetic. Leonie was amused. She thought it a relief after William.

When the man invited Leonie to spend a Sunday in the country he suggested an 11:30 train and dinner at a quaint and delightful inn. They left the city at 2, after Leonie had been refreshed by milk and crackers and two explanatory telephone messages. She didn't protest, because you can't tell the man that the one thing you like is certainty.

The man forgot telephone messages he had promised to send and never kept engagements he had earnestly made. Leonie preserved a remarkable equilibrium, and decided that it was rather distinguished for a man to be so busy that he couldn't keep track of little things.

However, at the end of a month she had lost 15 pounds and her ability to digest anything but hot milk and toasted gluten bread.

Then the man told her that if he ever fell enough in love with her to ask her to marry him she had better set the wedding at noon on Tuesday, if it were really to be at 5 o'clock on Wednesday, so he could be there. That didn't sound funny to Leonie.

And the next day she eloped with William after keeping him waiting a half an hour at the station.

MORAL—If you can't learn to be patient it's rather a good idea to have a husband who feels a little impatient to be with you. But there is nothing to promise that a man who is 15 minutes ahead for his engagements during his engagement won't learn to play kelly pool and come home late to dinner three nights a week after he is married.

THEY don't like their necks washed, or behind their ears, any more than other babies do. And all week long they're in deep, dark mischief, through the streets of the splendid, the streets of the weary, the streets of the drab-colored, the lanes of the lucky in the country—and so their mother puts it off until Saturday—"country style!" And then they put the kettle on, 'till it simmers gently, and the lady who came out of the sea, the mother of all the little Loves that ever were, "who has so many children she doesn't know what to do," Venus of the white arms and the amber hair, she souses 'em in one by one with a sound like a shoe full of rain water—plopsh! in.

And sh-sh-sh? out again! And up and down he goes, black hair and goldy, until his eyes are tight shutten and his body glistens and the dust of the wayside is worn off, and he screams aloud that he is dying and has no more skin on 'im—and then she hangs them up to dry by their once more heavenly white wings. So goes Saturday in Love-Land!

STRANGE NOTES OF COUNTESS TO MORGAN

By International News Service.

LONDON, July 16.—In the settlement of the claim of the Countess Diane de Beaucourt - Beauregard against the estate of J. Pierpont Morgan, which has been effected out of court, it is said the Countess received a sum of money and Mr. Morgan's executors agreed to return the vase, pedestal and picture, for the sale of which to Mr. Morgan the Countess demanded $50,000. Further the executors pay the Countess $5,000 and her legal costs.

Correspondence which spread over many years, and bundles of documents, including many letters penned by the Countess, were in the possession of the lawyers. There appeared to be nothing, however, written by Mr. Morgan.

While the financier was in Rome, the Countess stated, it was arranged between them that he was to reply to her letters through the medium of a Paris newspaper. The Countess' last interview with Morgan was on July 12, 1912, when he left for New York. Two days previously, she wrote him:

Dear Mr. Morgan:

It is on Saturday then that I shall have the pleasure of seeing you again. I will not disguise from you that this novel event in my life leaves me at this moment in a state of perturbation which is disquieting. Perhaps you are right in saying that life is short and one must always take advantage of the present hour in order to come to happiness as quickly as possible. Well, then let us do so.

COMTESSE DIANE.

IN ENDEARING TERMS.

She says she never asked for any written agreement concerning the picture. She always accepted his word, as everybody did. She expected the financier to settle with her on his return to London, but unfortunately he died before reaching London.

After his return to New York the Countess wrote him a long effusive letter eulogizing his "generous, amiable character." The letter began: "Friend—Beloved," and ended:

A woman of any worth would only love one of whom she has a right to be proud, and so at this moment I permit my heart to fly away quite freely to passion and do not subject it to the horrors of deprivation under the pretext of being strong minded.

It is in confidence that it flies to you. You may say what you think of it, but you will not destroy. I am sure, that possession to be admired. And though this affection must be, for me, a little strange, I ask of the destinies that they may surround it with all felicity, which will be to me the poetry of happiness.

Hoping to see you again very soon, desired friend, and as one must always belong to some one I am, with joy, yours,

COMTESSE DIANE.

CASUAL MEETINGS.

The Countess says she delivered the picture personally to Mr. Morgan, who consented to her having a copy made and gave her the picture back for this purpose. By the time the copy was made, however, Mr. Morgan had died.

The Countess' husband, who was a reputed son of Napoleon III, and the Countess de Beauregard, was at one time the French ambassador to London.

The Countess' admiration for Mr. Morgan seems to have been founded only upon a few casual meetings with him.

MISS RANTOUL TO MARRY FORMER HARVARD OARSMAN

Miss Josephine L. Rantoul, engaged to Henry L. A. Murray, captain of Harvard's 1915 crew.

The announcement of the engagement of Josephine L. Rantoul and Henry L. Alexander Murray of New York, Harvard '15, created the utmost interest in Back Bay society circles today.

The announcement was made by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, who are now at their North Shore place on West street, Beverly Farms.

Murray was captain of the Harvard varsity crew and was prominent in college life.

Miss Rantoul was formally presented to society at the Copley Plaza in December, 1912. She was then vice-president of the Sewing Circle. Since her debut, Miss Rantoul has been exceedingly popular. She is a member of the Vincent Club.

Miss Rantoul is the granddaughter of Robert S. Rantoul, former Mayor of Salem. His Summer estate adjoins that of his son, Neal Rantoul, at Beverly Farms. Miss Rantoul's uncles are William G. Rantoul, Beverly Rantoul, Augustus N. Rantoul, Edward L. Rantoul and Robert S. Rantoul, Jr. Her aunts are Edith Rantoul, Margaret Rantoul and Harriet C. Rantoul of Salem and Miss Beverly Farms.

Mr. Murray is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Alexander Murray of West Fifty-fifth street, New York, who are at their Summer place, Mid-River Farm, in the Thousand Islands at Clayton, N. Y. Murray plans to take up a course of study at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Back Bay society greatly interested in news of the coming wedding, the bride-elect being a Sewing Circle and Vincent Club girl, who made her debut at the Copley-Plaza in 1912. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul and granddaughter of former Mayor of Salem.

LIMA, O., CUT IN TWO BY RIVER FLOODS

By International News Service.

LIMA, O., July 16.—Two thousand houses were invaded by water here this morning as the result of a flood of the Ottawa River lowlands. From 500 of the homes the residents had been taken out by firemen and policemen in boats.

Two lives are known to have been lost. Mrs. William Breeaw, burned last night in an explosion when her house was inundated, died at the hospital, and Arthur Jackson, a negro, was drowned today while engaged in rescue work.

The rescuers worked all night and were still saving flood-bound residents this morning. The river is 10 feet above normal and rising several inches an hour. The rain has stopped and the crest is expected at noon. The waters are now within one foot of the stage of the big 1912 flood.

This morning the river was at the 1913 floods days, and still rising. The entire southern portion of the city, where the Lima Locomotive Works and the Erie Railroad shops are located, is cut off from the main section of the city.

There are 10,000 people in this flood-bound shop district. The men are able to get to the shops to work in boats.

Two bridges connecting two sections of the city are out of commission and other cars are tied up.

The Market House is under water, as is the refining plant of the Standard Oil Company. The gaslight plant was crippled last night when the water put the automatic stoker, the power is flooded and it is feared lives have been lost.

ROSENTHAL DIES AS SPY BEFORE FIRING SQUAD

LONDON, July 16.—Robert Rosenthal, convicted as a German spy after an alleged confession, has been shot before a firing squad, in execution of the court-martial sentence of death.

Rosenthal, when arrested in London early in June, as he was about to leave London, after a short stay there, had a passport which had been issued at the American embassy in Berlin. He admitted, however, that he was not an American citizen. Information gathered by the American embassy in London indicated that Rosenthal, accompanied by several friends, one of them an American, went to the embassy in order to more falsely that he was an American and received a temporary passport.

Ambassador Page at London, in reporting the case to the State Department at Washington, said stories were current in London to the effect that Rosenthal, in his confession, had charged that Captain von Brieger of the German Admiralty office had a complete equipment for issuing fraudulent American passports.

Baron Cheylesmore presided over the court-martial which convicted Rosenthal. The prisoner was defended by Walter Frampton. The court-martial was held behind closed doors.

Rabbit's Membrane.

GLENDALE, Cal., July 16.—The membrane from the eye of a rabbit was transferred to the eye of a man at the Glendale Sanitarium recently, Frank Delochino of Los Angeles was the patient. His own eye had been removed and it was necessary to enlarge the socket for an artificial eye. The membrane was not large enough to cover the socket and as a consequence the rabbit was brought into requisition.

Ex-Mayor in Prison Labors at Washtub

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 16.—Don C. Roberts, former Mayor of Terre Haute, Ind., now is engaged in rubbing soiled garments up and down a washboard in the laundry of the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, according to George Waddle, just paroled.

"Roberts had a soft job," he said. "He is a civil engineer and was doing a little work of that sort. But he is one of those fellows who never know when they are well off. He went to the warden with a complaint that the sheets on his bed weren't clean enough.

"'Oh, very well,' the warden told him, 'we'll just let you wash them yourself, and then you will be certain that they are washed clean.'

"And when I left the Mayor still was at work over a washtub. And say, maybe he wasn't sore!"

Sailor Robbed on Both Sides at Once

Victor Lind, a sailor on the ship Barona, the police say, was robbed by two rival gangs who held him up at the same time, in a doorway at No. 128 Central street, early today.

The police say while Michael Carfelli of one crowd was going through Lind's pockets on one side, Charles Robinson of another outfit was going through his pockets on the other side.

The police say the rivals failed to reach a gentleman's agreement concerning the division of spoils, and a free fight ensued. Lind is in the hospital, where several stitches were taken in his head. Carfelli and Robinson are under arrest.

SERVES NOTICE WELSH STRIKE MUST END

By JOHN C. FOSTER.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, July 16.—Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, conferred with representatives of the coal miners and operators of South Wales here today and served notice upon them that the strike, which has made 200,000 men idle, must be quickly ended.

The operators declared the miners responsible for the strike, stating that while the owners were willing to arbitrate the troubles the workers had declined absolutely to consider mediation.

The miners who have struck are practically in rebellion against the government and President Runciman so informed their leaders when he met them. It was said in official circles today that if the strike was not ended at once the government would take over the mines and operate them with workers under the protection of troops.

That the result of Mr. Runciman's conference was unsatisfactory was indicated by the announcement that Minister of Munitions David Lloyd George would go to South Wales to confer with leaders of the miners' federation at Cardiff and use his influence in an effort to have the men return to work. His report, it was said, would be made to the president of the Board of Trade upon his return to London.

The miners employed in the coal fields of the Rhondu Valley, who decided on Thursday to return to work, reversed their decision this morning, and their leaders said they would not enter the mines before Monday.

Body of Old 'L' Employe Is Found Floating in Harbor

Maurice Lee, who was for thirty-five years an employe of the Boston Elevated Railway, was found dead floating in the water at the north end of Marina Park, by two boys.

It is believed that he was overcome by the heat while in a rowboat or while walking along the beach, and that he fell into the water.

He was born in Ireland fifty-five years ago, and came to America at the age of fifteen. His home was at No. 816 East Fifth street.

HEAT DROPS LAMB AND PORK PRICES

The prices of lamb and pork, on account of the decrease in the demand caused by the warm weather, are low today, proving that even a hot wave has "its silver lining," and that if you did want to eat such heating food it wouldn't cost quite as much as a week ago. Judging by the weather forecast, prices in these meats have still some drop to make.

Berries are reported in great profusion and vegetables are plenty. Beef holds its price on account of Summer boarding house demands, which also effect the price of broiling chickens.

Lamb legs and loins were 18, compared with 22 and 25 cents last week, rib chops 30 and 35. Steak are up, best Eastern to 37 and best Western to 27. Print butter holds at 36. Face of the rump draws 40 to 45 and rump roast 28.

Asparagus, holding out later than usual sold at 18 cents a bunch, radishes 2 for 5, young onions 2 for 5, lettuce 5, cucumbers 5, Bermudas 5, native onions 4 cents a pound, squash 15, beets 4 a bunch, Irish potatoes 20 a peck, string and wax beans 5 a quart, peas 50 the peck, tomatoes 10 to 18 the pound and carrots 5 a bunch.

MORE TRAINS AT MEXICO CITY GIVE RELIEF

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Eleven trains reached Mexico City over the Vera Cruz railroad yesterday, according to advices to the State Department today from Consul Canada at Vera Cruz. Through passenger traffic will be established today, special pilot engines running ahead of each train to protect it against bandits.

Consul Canada reported that the train which was wrecked near Apizaco by a bomb was not a passenger train, but a special trainload of employes of the road. No Americans were injured.

Stephen Bonsal, a formal newspaper man, now with the Red Cross, who, it was rumored, was on the wrecked train, is safe in Vera Cruz.

Consul-General Hanna at Monterey notified the department today that, owing to the new crop which now is ripening he would close his famine relief station at the end of next week until after the new crop shall have been consumed.

American missionaries arriving at Monterey from Victoria have informed Hanna that the new crop at Victoria has greatly relieved the famine situation there.

Advices to the Carranza agency here today tell of fighting between the Carranzistas and Villistas at Caballona near Douglas, Ariz.

The Carranzista force under General Plutarcho Elias Calles defeated the Villa force of one thousand men under General Trujillo, says the report.

MRS. DANIEL WILDER SMITH, who has just been married at Lynn. This photograph was taken five years ago at the time of her elopement with A. G. Hooper.

Mrs. Gladys E. Reynolds Hooper, twenty-three, who five years ago figured in a sensational elopement to Derry, N. H., with Alexander Green Hooper, of No. 59 Essex street, Lynn, has been married to Daniel Wilder Smith of Kennebunkport, Me.

He is a member of the United States Marine Corps, stationed at Charlestown.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Reynolds of Lynn. Twice she eloped with Hooper before she was married to him. The first time the marriage was thwarted by the mother of the bride, who met them at Nashua, N. H. The bride resided at No. 159 Lewis street, Lynn.

The Rev. Arthur E. Herriman performed the ceremony. Mrs. Perlie Hayward of Lynn was matron of honor, and Arthur Johnston of Detroit, Mich., was best man.

COUNCIL BLAMED FOR CITY'S LACK OF MONEY

The city government of Boston is facing direst poverty with not enough money in sight to run the city for the rest of the year, according to the experts, and this alarming condition is attributed today by the Mayor's office to the "short-sightedness" of the City Council.

"Mayor Curley has called the seriousness of the city's finances to the attention of the City Council, but that body has taken no steps to remedy it or prepare for the future," said Cornelius A. Reardon, the Mayor's secretary.

"The Mayor knew at the beginning of the year that the income from taxable property would materially decrease. The fall in railroad stocks and other forms of property, together with poor business conditions and the migration of the owners of other property, have combined to make the city's income lower than for years.

"It is true that the Mayor recommended reduction of the appropriations to as small an amount as was possible, but his estimates left them in such a condition that the city would have enough money on hand. The council then pared down the appropriations, and is, therefore, responsible for the condition.

"That the Mayor foresaw the condition is evident from his recommendation to the Legislature for authority to increase the tax rate and derive a larger income for the city."

The City Auditor's report shows, according to the financial experts at City Hall, that the reserve fund has been reduced to about $20,000, the lowest in the history of metropolitan Boston. The original yearly appropriation for the fund was but $100,000, as compared to $250,000 last year. Additional appropriations increased the fund last year to substantially $410,000. The Mayor's supplementary budget, now before the Council for action, allows an additional increase of but $42,500 for the reserve fund.

The Mayor's supplementary budget totals $196,000, for what the Mayor deems urgent demands.

Boston Man to Coach U. of Penn. Crews

William Haines, coach of the Union Boat Club for the past three years, is the probable coach of the crews of U. of Penn. for next season as a result of the retirement of Vivian Nichalls, announced yesterday. Nichalls resigned his position to join the British army.

The Union Boat Club has been very successful under Haines. Its members will not stand in his way of bettering himself. Not only has Penn been seeking Haines, but it has been reported that he was to be appointed to a position at Harvard.

RED SOX CAN GO INTO LEAD TODAY

CLEVELAND, July 16.—The Red Sox wind up their current stand in Cleveland today and hit out for Chicago on an early evening train. Five games are billed to be crowded into the four days' play. That's because the two dashing outfits only engaged in three of their four scheduled combats when they battled in the Windy City in May.

"The White Sox will find us going our fastest and I won't issue any 'beef' if they should flay us in the series," stated "General Bill" Carrigan this morning. "Hay Collins' return to form helps us a lot.

"That was a tough one Joe Wood dropped here Wednesday. The defeat spilled his record of eight straight triumphs. Leonard is my only star not at his best, and it won't surprise me very much if 'Dutch' pitches in his old-time form the next time I work him.

"As for the regulars, every one of them is on edge. Gainer is doing excellent work on first. Then Barry is more than delivering on second. In my opinion Jack's addition gave us just the extra heft we needed to clinch the pennant."

Ernie Shore triumphed over the Indians yesterday. Hence the Red Sox now own the advantage in the series, three games to two. Foster is underlined to officiate today, and, while Cleveland has always been a hard team for him to beat, Carrigan is confident "Little Nemo" will land in front. Willie Mitchell, Lee Fohl's best bet, is generally picked to oppose Foster.

The Red Sox gained a full length on the White Sox yesterday, thanks to copping here while the Athletics were downing the clan of Rowland, and now but six points separate the two flying leaders.

"Secret Draft" Again.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Reports reached minor league players in this section that the "secret draft" under which their players were taken into leagues of higher class last year will be in vogue again this season.

Hardware Dealer Is Contestant for World's Series Trip

Henry M. Sanders.

The AMERICAN'S World's Series Contest is booming along at a right merry clip.

The hundreds of fans who are enrolled in the competition for the twenty-five free trips to the 1915 Championship flip Games are showing the fighting spirit that promises to make the battle of votes a record breaker.

Rooters all over New England are showing their interest in their various favorites by lining up their friends and even factions that indicate, even at this early date in the contest, the keenest kind of rivalry for a place on the AMERICAN'S DE LUXE Pullman Special when it pulls out for the city or cities where the famous battles will be held.

All expenses will be paid by the AMERICAN for the fortunate twenty-five who are elected, by the vote of their fellow-fans, to the high honors of New England's most popular fans.

Henry M. Sanders, of 27 Eliot street, Boston, is a candidate, who bids fair to put up an interesting battle for one of the twenty-five places of honor.

He is a hardware dealer and president of the New England Hardware Dealers' Association, a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows and Colonial Club of Dorchester.

TO INVESTIGATE EVERS' CHARGES

President John K. Tener and Secretary Heydler of the National League will be in Boston today and, according to announcement, comes here to investigate the alleged charges of Captain Johnny Evers of the Braves that the moguls of the National League had ordered a "close race."

Evers, during the excitement following a decision in a game of the Braves-Cardinals series, passed remarks to the umpire and then "talked" to the fans.

Evers was greatly surprised to learn that President Tener gave the report serious consideration.

"For any one to believe that I could seriously allege that the race was being fixed seems incredible, for any one who knows anything knows as well as I do that such a thing would be impossible," Evers said.

"I do not recall just what I did say during the protest over Rigler's decision. It was probably the usual talk during discussions of that kind, never taken seriously by those mixed up in the affair, and never intended to be taken seriously.

"When the report appeares three days ago I immediately denounced it as a misrepresentation, but the parties who may have called President Tener's attention to the original report may not have been so particular about calling his attention to my disclaimer.

"However, if he is coming to Boston, he will learn from me how I stand on organized baseball."

Taber and Meanix After World's Marks

Lovers of track athletics will flock to the Stadium this afternoon to witness Norman Taber and Bill Meanix attempt world's records in the mile-run and quarter-mile run respectively.

The advisers of these two athletes are certain that they will set new marks.

Meanix set up a new world's mark in the 47-second, but was not given credit for his endeavors because of a slight technicality that the management overlooked.

BRAVES IN FINAL WITH PIRATES

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

If the Braves can win today they will have made quite a respectable showing against the Pirates and the fans will begin to feel that hope for a return engagement on the championship stuff is not lost. If the Braves win today the series will stand three to 1 in their favor.

It will be the last game of the series. All the battles have been hard fought. There is no quitting in the National League race. Every manager believes he has a chance to win the flag and they are trying their hardest to annex every game.

It was expected that Tom Hughes would pitch yesterday, but Rudolph took up the fight and won his game, so that leaves Tom free to try his hand again today. For the Pirates, McQuillin or Mamaux will probably do the box duty.

The Braves have not begun to hit in the right way, but there are indications that the swatfest will not be longer delayed. They, at least, are beginning to hit the ball hard, even if it does not go in the right direction. Fittstrick, for example, is sending out some hard raps, but the fielders are getting to them and robbing him of base hits. The same may be said of Egan.

When the boys do begin to hit—Zowie!

Homer Wins Game.

QUINCY, Ill., July 16.—George Cummings, pitcher for the local Three-I League team, held Rockford without a hit through 10 innings. In the 11th the opposing catcher hit a home run and Rockford won, 1 to 0.

White Hopes Dodged Willard

After he had whipped Carl Morris, One Round Davis, Boer Rodel (twice), Tom McMahon and Dan Dailey, the "White Hopes" gave Jess Willard a wide berth. He could not get a fight.

So, he relates in tomorrow's autobiography in the AMERICAN, he determined that it was time to hunt up the world's champion, Jack Johnson, and try conclusions with him.

Johnson was in Paris and for six months Willard's manager dickered with him.

Tomorrow's AMERICAN tells how.

SIDELIGHTS on SPORTS By A·H·C·Mitchell

JOHN K. TENER, former Governor of Pennsylvania, now president of the National League, will be in Boston today and attend the game between the Braves and Pirates at Fenway Park.

THE RED SOX are still "sticking" right up there." As a result of yesterday's battles in the American League they are now practically tied for first place again, only four points in a thousand separating them from the White Sox.

Our boys play one more game in Cleveland and then go to Chicago for the big doings. They are billed to perform in the Windy City on Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. If the weather is kind there will be some big money at the gate.

YOU never have seen the uniforms the Braves have been wearing on the road, have you? Not many Boston fans have seen them. They are of solid navy blue and on a real dark day they look like the weather.

This is the third season that fans of the other league cities have poked fun at these baseball suits, so the Braves are going to have new ones.

The new traveling uniforms to be used on the next trip will be of steel gray in color with caps of the same shade. The red Indian head that now adorns the sleeves will be transferred to the breast in place of the letter B. A small letter B will be placed on the caps. The stockings will be the same as the Braves now use at home and on the road. It may truthfully be said that the Braves never change their stockings.

Doubtless the boys will present a much smarter appearance on the road. There is much superstition among the Braves. It is good betting that if they were leading the home team there would never be a change in the color of the uniforms. But the Changs are in last place. There is nothing to risk.

ROBERTSON of the Giants catches the ball in a peculiar manner. He shapes his hands like a tulip, says the New York Sun.

So did Chick Stahl.

MY confrere, the Rabbit, has changed his style of batting a little bit. The bludgeon he uses is the same in length—about nineteen inches—but instead of choking it to death he grasps it close to the handle and takes a healthy swing. Up to Tuesday he hadn't made a hit in about eleven games. Then he banged out a four-bagger. Yesterday he clouted out a fine single and also sacrificed. But he chocked his bat to do the bunting act.

BROOKLYN'S winning streak has led to some lively betting on the outcome of the National League championship race. In one resort $100 to $600 has been laid that Brooklyn wins the pennant and $300 to $200 that Brooklyn finishes in the first division.

One hundred dollars even has also been wagered that New York does not finish in the first division and $100 even that Brooklyn beats Chicago.

FRED SNODGRASS of the Giants, who got "in bad" here in the world's series of 1912 and again last Fall, when Mayor Curley felt it his duty to assert himself, is now "in bad" in his home town. The New York fans are hounding him all the time. He gets a roast for every move he makes and very little appreciation for his good plays.

It might be a good idea to transfer him to some other city.

DUNDEE BATTLES RIVERS TONIGHT

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Joe Rivers vs. Johnny Dundee at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sam Langford vs. Jack Thompson at Denver.

Charley Weinert vs. George Rodel at Far Rockaway, N. Y.

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE should be plenty of action when Joe Rivers, the California lightweight, meets Johnny Dundee of New York in a ten-round bout at Brooklyn tonight. Rivers and Dundee are classed with the world's leading lightweights, and the winner of this evening's encounter will be in a position to secure matches with some of the star men in the 122-125-pound division.

Rivers and Dundee are well known to the "fans" in Boston. Rivers recently fought a twelve-round draw with Gilbert Gallant at the Atlas A. A., while Dundee fought a draw with Matty Baldwin and knocked out Jimmy Gallant at the Triple A organization last year.

It will be a real battle between lightweights when Rivers and Dundee clash, as both boys are able to make 122 pounds ringside, which is the real lightweight limit. Freddy Welsh, Willie Ritchie and a few more "lightweights" are unable to reduce to this figure. Charley White can make 122 pounds ringside, while "Young" Saylor could also probably reduce to the poundage. Most of our "lightweights," however, feel much better when fighting around 140 pounds.

SAM LANGFORD will also don his fighting togs and his famous green kimona this evening. The "Tar Baby" is booked to exchange blows with Jack Thompson at Denver. Thompson is a Denver heavyweight, but he has never startled the world by his work within the bonny ropes. As Langford is in fine condition just now, he will probably win by a knockout. Sam has a couple of more bouts scheduled to be decided in the West. He will then come back to Boston and will be ready to talk business with some of our star heavyweights.

THERE is a great deal of interest being shown in the twelve-round tussle between Matty Baldwin and Gilbert Gallant, which will be held at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. It will be the third meeting between these two men, Baldwin already having two victories to his credit. Matty, however, did not have much of a margin in his favor in either encounter. The last bout between Baldwin and Gallant was so close that many of the "fans" who witnessed the whirl were of the opinion that a draw would have been the proper decision. As Gallant and Baldwin are both aggressive, hard-hitting lightweights and old rivals, the "fans" should witness a contest replete with almost as much action as was furnished in the recent skirmish between Charley White and "Young" Saylor.

BALDWIN would rather beat Gallant than any boxer in the world, as they were formerly "stable mates." Gallant comes right back and states that next to defeating Freddy Welsh, he would take great pride in winning from the Charlestown veteran than any lightweight in captivity. And there you are.

Big Ed Walsh to Try "Come-Back" Today

CHICAGO, July 16.—Big Ed Walsh, the veteran star of the Chicago White Sox, who has not been started in a game for more than a year, will try to make his "come-back" appearance today.

Manager Rowland and players on the club believe that Walsh has regained his old-time form after his long rest and treatment under several specialists. He will oppose the Philadelphia club in his initial appearance of the season.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the twentieth of a series of articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

What to Do to Strengthen Your Biceps

We have passed through various stages, in this country, in our conception of what kind of gymnastic exercise is best for the development of strength and vitality. Heavy weights were in vogue when I was a boy; today, athletes are afraid of them, and prefer vigorous movements with light weights, or with none at all. Great importance is attached to quickness of movement, and it was found that hard and big muscles impeded speed. Boxers today like to have smooth, elastic, and comparatively soft muscles; so do baseball men, and rowers. And it may be that this idea is carried too far. Speed is an excellent thing, but endurance may be better sometimes; and enduring muscles must be capable of a tension which will make them feel hard to the touch.

But for a long time, and even now, quite often, when the man you met in the street wanted to indicate to you how strong he was, he would double up his right arm and ask you to feel of his biceps. And very likely it felt like a knot in a hickory log. But it did not follow that he had a muscular development equally formidable all over his body; in fact, his biceps might be by far his strongest point—a sort of exhibition muscle, promising more than he could fulfil, as the signs outside country show-tents do. And a strong biceps, without the rest of the muscular system to back it up, is of small practical use, and of almost none at all to the interior organs of the body.

But a strong biceps is good in its degree; for many movements which are of great benefit to heart, lungs and digestion require strength of arm to perform them. So I will now show you the biceps exercise; though several of the exercises which you have already had, had as indirect effect on the biceps muscle.

Lift your arms to the level of the shoulders laterally. Tense your body, arms and legs all over, Draw in your abdomen. Erect your head. Fill out your chest.

Now bend your arms—both of them simultaneously—slowly and strongly, with fists clenched, until the knuckles of each fist touch, or nearly touch, the outer curve of the deltoid. This will make the biceps swell up and harden. Hold it that way a moment, and then unbend the arm and return it to the horizontal position. Do not drop the elbow when you bend the arm.

Do that twenty times with all your might, and you will know that you have a biceps.

Do it every day for three months, and other people will acknowledge your biceps, if you care to demonstrate it to them. But you will have the satisfaction of knowing that your other muscles are proportionately strong, and that your insides are rejoicing.

McLoughlin in Coast Tennis Finals Today

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.—Maurice McLoughlin will meet William Johnstone in the finals of the Exposition singles tournament. McLoughlin worked his way into the finals after a tremendous match with Johnny Strachan, winning in five sets, while Johnston qualified to meet the auburn-haired star by a rather hollow defeat of Clarence J. Griffin in four sets. In addition to the singles semi-finals, Church and Mathey, the Eastern doubles team, qualified to play in the Exposition finals by a rather tame defeat of Ambrose and Bass of this city, 6—0, 6—4, 6—2.

FOUR IN BIG RACE AT BEACH OVAL

Jimmy Moran, the veteran Chelsea biker, will make his season's debut at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night, when he meets George Wiley, Elmer Collins and Bobby Walthour in a thirty-mile motor-paced race.

That Moran is still able to give a good account of himself is evidenced in the fact that he has just completed a successful series of races in Chicago, where he cleaned up in good shape. The Windy City manager offered to renew his contract but the Chelsea veteran preferred to be nearer home.

Tomorrow night will be a gala occasion for the Revere "fans," for Willie Tarville will make his first appearance in the professional ranks, meeting Harold Rollins, the Everett star, in a special match race, best two in three heats.

Manager Butler received numerous requests yesterday to rematch Victor Linart and Leon Didier. Butler promised that he would do all he could but could give no definite answer at this time as the French star is still on the disabled list. He received a fractured collar bone but will be able to ride again within two weeks.

The $1,000 is still hanging fire, Linart refusing to take it, preferring to leave it lay until something could be done toward rematching him with Didier. The Belgian visited Didier yesterday and expressed sorrow because of the accident which befell his opponent.

100 AMERICANS IMPERILLED IN CHINA

WASHINGTON, July 16.—At least a hundred American missionaries are imperilled by the Chinese floods, though none are known to have perished, the State Department said today.

Hongkong estimates Chinese have been drowned by tens of thousands in Kwantung, Kwangsi and Kiangsi.

The gun-boat Callao is proceeding to the territory for rescue work.

A fire-swept area of one mile and raging floods are handicapping the work of rescue in Canton. The city was in darkness during the night, the water having inundated the electric light plant.

Consul-General Anderson at Hongkong reported that Canton is isolated except to powerful steamers, thousands have been drowned, and tens of thousands are taking refuge on high places. Thousands of houses have been burned. American mission property has either been damaged or destroyed, and foreigners are taking refuge at the British consulate at Fu Chow.

Thousands of natives lived on houses-boats in the river and department officials pointed out that probably a great number of them had perished.

The majority of Americans and foreigners of Canton lived on the Island of Shameen, which now is under 10 feet of water. The foreign consulates were established on Shameen, together with hotels and other public buildings.

The gunboat Wilmington will help in the rescue and relief work at Canton. That work must present some difficulties because of the great area covered. Canton's suburbs stretch along the flood-swept river for five miles, while the city proper is six miles in circumference and inclosed by walls 20 feet thick and 25 to 40 feet high.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened strong and active. Offerings were limited and demand had increased considerably over night. On theory of the recent strength of the New York market is that foreign liquidation has greatly decreased. A New York banker is quoted as saying concerning U. S. Steel, in which trading was on a large scale yesterday, that he had observed very little selling of it recently that could be attributed to foreign sources. This may mean, he remarked, "that European liquidation is about over." War order buying continued strong. Bethlehem Steel touching a new high. Railroads averaging a little higher. Copper share prices had a narrow range. Concerning the international situation, in financial circles there is more confidence that Germany will be careful not to give the United States again by submarine warfare methods. The passing of the peril around the crops will make big harvests more of a support to stock markets. Many things indicate that general business is slowly improving, and there is more optimism as to trade during the coming Autumn.

At the end of fifteen minutes there was considerable profit taking. Bears put pressure upon several roads, including Southern Pacific. The list did not yield much on the first, however. Among gains at that period were Amalgamated ¼, Chino ¼, Anaconda ⅝, American Can ¼, Atchison ⅝, N. Y. Central ¼, Union Pacific ¼, U. S. Steel ¼, American Locomotive ¼, Baldwin ⅝, Bethlehem 1½, Crucible ⅝ and Studebaker ¼. Declines included American Smelting ¼, Utah Copper ⅝, Canadian Pacific ¼, New Haven ¼, Reading ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅛, St. Paul ¼, Rock Island ⅝ and Goodrich ⅝.

In half an hour after the opening New Haven was off 1¼, Southern Pacific 1⅛, Amalgamated ⅞, Union Pacific ¾, N. Y. Central ⅝, U. S. Steel ¼ and war order issues showed less gain. "Katy" sold at 6.

COPPER METAL QUIET.

Copper shares were about as quiet around the opening of the Boston market as the copper metal market anywhere. It is reported that electrolytic was offered in New York yesterday at 19¼ cents a pound. But spelter prices were firm and the inquiry for that product was large. It is said that foreign demand for lead has increased. Among active issues in early trading in this class were Copper Range and American Zinc. Gains here included Butte & Superior ⅝, Lake Copper ⅛, Copper Range ½, Mohawk ¼, United Fruit ¼, Shoe Machinery ¼, American Woolen preferred ½, Alaska Gold ¼ and Cosden & Calumet & Arizona ½ and Greene-Cananea ½.

As regards the New York opening, a dispatch says: "The upward movement was more orderly than at any time this week. The attention paid to the railway list made a favorable impression here.

But before the end of the first hour Missouri, Kansas & Texas common and preferred sold at new low prices, as did Rock Island. Bears were searching the list for vulnerable points.

HEARST-SELIG MAN HONORED AT FAIR

By International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.—Edward C. MacManus, general manager of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial service, outlined the higher ideals of the moving picture news service in an address at the Court of the Universe at the exposition here.

Nearly 20,000 persons attended the exercises, at which MacManus was chief speaker. The memorial by Director Frank L. Brown was an exposition. Prominent moving picture stars were on the platform and the crowd, which filled every foot of open space in the court was filmed for use in the Hearst-Selig news weekly.

While MacManus discussed the moving picture industry in its connection with the exposition he dwelt upon the wide educational influence of news pictures as supplementary to the daily press. He said in this address:

NEW EDUCATIONAL FORCE.

"The one striking new feature of modern life is the wider and wider spread of education. With the supreme inventive genius of modern men the press has been supplemented by the moving picture film, which not only gives the same wide presentation of the subject but which visualizes it in presenting pictorially, and which has established itself as a great educational force in the modern civilized community.

"The organization of Hearst-Selig pictorial service is founded upon a vision of its endless stimulating possibilities for the future, and an analysis of the great social forces involved in this daily presentation of the world's news to the multitude.

"For the hour this great exposition is the focus and centre of the world's aspiration. One of the great agencies in bringing the world to the exposition and in making the exposition to the world is the moving picture film, which brings its news and messages of light to the most remote communities, and to the alien peoples across the seas.

FILMS AID EXPOSITION.

"Millions of you, of which I am the humble agent and emissary, will multiply a thousand fold the educational influence of this great exposition. Its daily activities from the laying of the first stone, its press of guests, the concourse of the peoples of the earth, are made to live again in far places among those who have been unable to visit this enchanted city. On the other hand, those who visit the exposition may look on in daily touch with the affairs of the world through the news film.

"The Hearst-Selig news pictorial incorporates those business requirements of system, alertness, energy, enterprise, which have gone into the building of modern newspapers.

"The daily result of these activities parallels in a way the daily gathering of the news of the world and the making of the four corners of the earth.

"It is with this in mind that I feel at liberty to say that I believe an agency of such wide scope, of such educative value and such potent possibilities in the spread of knowledge, fully merits the honor which you have conferred upon me.

HONORS DEAD HEROES.

"In making possible the daily unfolding of the world's story on the moving picture screen obstacles have been met, difficulties have been overcome and lives have been sacrificed. The issue of great deeds is not settled with the banners flying and with an exchange of polite amenities.

"On this occasion I wish to pay tribute, not only personally, but on behalf of the great enterprise which I represent, to two other men who went down with the Lusitania while on a mission for the Hearst-Selig service, and to two other men who lost their lives in the European theatre of warfare.

"In this instance, it seems to me that this exposition, memorial to the creative genius of man, is also a memorial of brave deeds, faithfully done by obscure workers, in all the varied walks of life.

"In behalf of those whom I represent, as in expressing my own personal gratification, I wish to tender the most sincere thanks to the management of this exposition, honor done the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

TELLS AIMS OF SERVICE.

"I may safely say that this exposition has been and will be a stimulus to our organization in the full and faithful performance of its work in disseminating beauty, in interpreting life and in making the screen not only the casual and the momentary phases of life, but in portraying as you have done here, the things of deeper significance.

"So that we may, in the cynicism of the old Persian philosopher who pictured human kind as

"'Moving now
Of magic shapes, that come and go,
Round to it the sun-illumined lantern
Held in midnight by the master of the show.'"

WILLARD TELLS OF INDOOR WORK

By JESS WILLARD.

(Copyright, 1915, By A. Newell). All Rights Reserved.)

FIGHTING out the right kind of exercise was much harder than picking out the kind of food that was best for me. I could go into a restaurant and buy what I wanted to eat each other at first.

But what was I to do for exercise when I lived in a hall bedroom in a city? To be sure, I could go walking, but walking isn't enough.

Even if I had the money for a punching bag I couldn't put it up in my room. The same way with a set of those pulley machines. The big would make too much noise, and the "exerciser" mark up the walls.

So I sat down and began figuring on what I could do in the way of "indoor culture" in a 10x12 bedroom.

I remembered when I was a kid we used to see who could bend over and touch ground with the flat of the hand without bending the knees.

That looked pretty good to me, for it was a movement that would catch all my abdominal muscles and keep them good and hard. That was the exercise I started off with every morning, the minute I got up. I would go in front of the open window, and bend for all I was worth.

Then I'd sponge myself off with cold water, shave and dress. After breakfast I would take the subway to 59th and Cortlandt park, and run out over those old Westchester county hills. I don't like walking on the flat. Hill climbing, especially when you hold your head stiff, is a hundred per cent. better. It's great for the heart and wind.

Bob Fitzsimmons was a big about road work. He spent far more time running than fighting when he did boxing and wrestling. Corbett was another champion who liked to use his legs on steep hills.

I met a fellow one day—a mighty good runner, by the way, by the name—and he introduced me into a gymnasium up in the Bronx. It was up there I got several other good exercises for my room to do in the morning and the evening.

Lie flat on your face on the floor, then raise yourself on your hands. Keep the body stiff, and the legs stretched out. I couldn't keep it up more than five minutes at the start, but after a month or so I could bob up and down for half an hour without feeling very tired.

A little lightweight also gave me a good movement that he had learned from George Green, the original Young Corbett. Green was a crackling welter in his day, and thought he'd been champion. He hadn't been so lazy. He's the boxing instructor out at the Olympic Club in San Francisco now, and his prime pupil is a son of Governor Hiram Johnson.

His movement is this: Stand with your arms by your side and your feet together. Jump your feet wide apart, and throw your hands up over your head, all in the same motion, and keep it up as fast as as you can. Keep your hands open, palms to front, and dance the movement on your toes.

It gets all your leg muscles and back muscles and pulls up your chest. Take a deep breath on the upward swing of the arms and let it out as you go down.

Here's another good one: Lie flat on the floor on your back and raise first one leg and then the other. Don't bend the knees, and don't raise the body above the hips.

Then try raising both legs together, and after trying both of them as far to the right as you can and then to the left. Try to keep your shoulders and hips absolutely still.

The next thing is to keep the legs flat on the floor and raise the body up from the hips. This bunch of movements is the best developer of the whole body that I know outside of boxing itself.

Every morning I went at these exercises for half an hour before breakfast. Then I'd walk the streets for half an hour before I went in to get my breakfast. Don't put food into your stomach in the morning until you've breathed a whole lot of fresh air and worked a bit.

Before my dinner at noon I'd work at my exercises an hour, and again before supper I'd take a whack at them. I always like to take a long walk before I go to bed, but sometimes, when the weather is bad, I'd do my exercises for ten or fifteen minutes.

That's how I kept in shape during the two years when I didn't have any manager, any trainer or any gymnasium to work in. I had my own rubber, too, and to this day I can never get over with a Turkish towel as good as any handler.

Because I keep in shape all the time I never have to train very hard. My training for Johnson was mostly boxing. That's where I was weak, and I used four sparring partners all the time. You can tell that I was in good shape physically, for right from the first day I could wear all four of them out.

When I train I do some road work, of course, and I'm great skipping the rope. But because I keep up my room exercise day in, day out, week after week, I never have to get at training like most fighters do.

People wonder why I never do much wrestling. It's because wrestling is a bad thing for a boxer. It makes big muscles, and big muscles take away from speed. Frank Gotch, the champion, looks as fast as lightning when he's in action, but he'd look slow to a dray horse compared to a boxer.

Some years ago, if you remember, he thought that he'd like to be a fighter. The wrestling game was sort of dead, and he figured that his strength might carry him to the top. Well, he trained up with a second rater out in Alaska by the name of Boomer Weeks.

Nobody ever heard of Weeks before or since, but what he did to Gotch was a sin and a shame. He won in 12 rounds, and in every round he made a punching bag out of the wrestler.

I never use heavy weights or big dumbbells because I'm afraid of big, bulgy muscles. When I do my room exercise I use a pair of little light wooden bells that are really more of a hand grip than anything else.

Big muscles are more of a handicap than anything else. Out in San Francisco once I saw one of these professional weight lifters go into the ring with a skinny middleweight. It looked like a plain case of murder when they faced each

The middleweight lifter had legs like marble pillars, his chest was as big as a beer barrel and the muscles on his arms stood out like boa constrictors. Gosh, he was the strongest looking man I ever set my eyes on.

The middleweight was tall and slender by the side of the weight lifter he looked like a toothpick. You couldn't see a muscle on him, and everybody thought he was going to be broken in two.

They started off, Joe Walcott and Jack Dempsey were wrestlers before they went into the ring, but I reckon they hadn't done much of it. To hit hard and fast, the muscles in the legs, shoulders and arms ought to be as soft as silk and as hard as steel.

John A. Sullivan and all the fighters before him were big muscled heavyweights who were built for the game. The rules of the English prize ring permitted grappling as well as fighting, and the mauly fights were won by heavy falls as by blows.

I hope that these room exercises I have given here will be of help to "boys," I guess I'm getting too old for you as big and strong as I am, but they'll certainly give you health and strength. Take a half hour every morning, and you'll be surprised to see the difference in even a month.

And every boy has his Sunday off. Instead of sitting around over at a ball game, or hotfooting it around the pool halls, get a couple more on a car and go out into the country. Take your lunch with you in a paper bag, and have a regular hoofing it over the hills.

It isn't much use talking up the exercises unless you're going to stick at them. Try to make them a habit. It's the first month that is the hard month. It used to take all my grit to stick at them when I first began.

So there you have it! Look out for the food you eat, like I told you yesterday, take morning exercises and room work, walk to your work, and spend Sundays in the country. Keep away from whiskey and tobacco, and you'll develop into a fighting man.

If John D. Rockefeller had done some of these things, he might not be as rich, but I'll bet he'd be happier.

(Tomorrow Willard will tell how he came to decide that he was ready for a fight with Johnson.)

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

While Inventors Study, Build Up the Navy

LESS than one year ago Secretary Daniels opposed any item in the navy appropriation bill for aircraft on the ground that they were still in the experimental stage, and enough money could be taken from other funds to continue the experiments. Over this opposition and against his protest Congress forced upon him an appropriation of a million dollars.

It is this attitude toward our notable American invention that makes doubly interesting Secretary Daniels' request to Mr. Edison to head a board for the purpose of encouraging American inventors to supply the navy with novel and valuable devices for increasing its efficiency.

The sudden about-face from opposition to any encouragement for American inventors of aircraft to earnest advocacy of a systematic plan for the encouragement of any inventions of naval worth is, of course, gratifying, but the country will await developments.

We have no doubt that, properly supported, such a body as that which Mr. Edison has agreed to head may be of notable advantage to the United States. It will need support in the Navy Department, not only from the Secretary, but from the bureau chiefs. Past history has not shown the navy officers particularly receptive of new ideas. The Monitor fought her winning battle with the Merrimac while still under the shadow of naval distrust, and as the private property of her builder. Admiral Farragut died still disdainful of ironclads. It took Europe to teach America that the Wright brothers and Holland had really found the way to wage war in the air and under the seas.

Congressional support, too, will be needed for the new board. But in securing this support it will be unwise to lay too much stress upon the services that board may be able to render. We do not want the upbuilding of the navy along lines already established blocked by a vague hope that a group of geniuses, headed even by so practical an inventor as Mr. Edison, may in the dire moment of need luckily hit upon some marvellous contrivance that will save the United States from its own folly.

That is, in fact, the danger of Secretary Daniels' plan—though it is a danger easily averted by pursuing the steady upbuilding of the navy while awaiting the fruits of the inventors' cogitations. So often has the United States been saved by mere luck from the logical results of its own policy of unpreparedness that Congress is likely to be niggardly with naval appropriations on the plea that some great invention by Mr. Edison's board will make dreadnoughts and submarines alike fit only for the scrap heap. But while the all-compelling invention lags just a little short of perfection—as great inventions commonly do for years—an enemy may strike.

The Secretary of the Navy may well be applauded for his idea of enlisting the nation's inventors and scientists in the nation's defence. But while they study, the building of dreadnoughts, battle cruisers, submarines and aircraft must go on.

Come, Gentlemen; What Are You Going to Do About It?

WE welcome our excellent neighbor, the Boston Post, as an ally in our crusade for better streets. The Post says:

Everybody agrees that Boston's streets are a disgrace, and that the sooner they are put in decent shape the better it will be for the credit of the city. The disagreement between the Mayor and City Council as to the way to get the requisite amount of money to reconstruct and repair them ought not to last much longer. The Post believes that a deadlock in this vitally important matter is far more destructive to the city's best interests than either way of settling the money-raising could possibly be.

With the Mayor's return from the West this squabbling over a reform that all admit must be made should cease at once. If it does not, both parties to the controversy are likely to hear from the people.

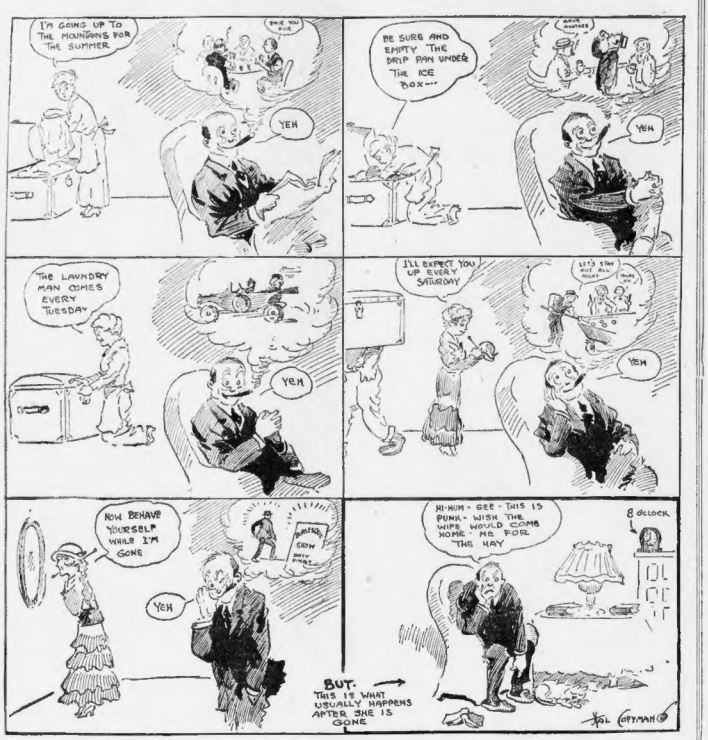
When the Post says "Everybody agrees that Boston's streets are a disgrace" it reiterates a sentiment that the AMERICAN has made familiar to everybody in Greater Boston.

This paper has published interviews with many distinguished citizens, including Messrs. Elmer J. Bliss and Eben D. Jordan, to the same effect. When men of their eminence and newspapers of the high standing and public spirit of the Boston AMERICAN and the Post are united upon a matter of this importance it is obvious that popular sentiment is unanimous and that something has got to be done.

It is up to Messrs. STORROW, COLLINS, ATTRIDGE, COULTHURST, COLEMAN, BALLANTYNE and HAGAN to devise ways and means of doing it and redeeming Boston from the reproach of filthy, ill-paved and neglected streets.

Come, gentlemen! What are you going to do about it?

AND SO IT GOES——(SOMETIMES)



I'M GOING UP TO THE MOUNTAINS FOR THE SUMMER
AND YOU STAY HOME
YEH
BE SURE AND EMPTY THE DRIP PAN UNDER THE ICE BOX—
YEH
THE LAUNDRY MAN COMES EVERY TUESDAY
YEH
I'LL EXPECT YOU UP EVERY SATURDAY
LET'S STAY OUT ALL NIGHT!
YEH
NOW BEHAVE YOURSELF WHILE I'M GONE
YEH

BUT. THIS IS WHAT USUALLY HAPPENS AFTER SHE IS GONE

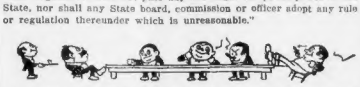
—More Truth Than Poetry—

By James J. Montague

A Song for By and By

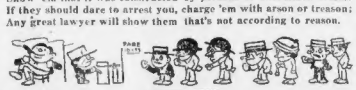
In the new New York Constitution this provision has been written: "The Legislature shall not pass any bill under the police power of the State, nor shall any State board, commission or officer adopt any rule or regulation thereunder which is unreasonable."



FILL up the sweatshops with children; work 'em twelve hours a day,
Cutting expenses on wages makes any factory pay.
Then if buttinsky commissions say that your work is too raw,
Trot out the new Constitution; show them the organic law!
Don't let them argue that children ought to be going to school.
Prove that they went beyond reason when they laid down such a rule.

PUT up the fares on the street cars, railroads and subways and such;
What if a clamoring public shout that they're paying too much?
Don't let the State intermeddle; run your affairs your own way,
Show 'em the new Constitution when they attempt to get gay.
If they should try regulation, instantly go to the mat;
Any wise lawyer will tell them there is no reason in that.

GRAB all the parks for your freight yards, clog up the streets with the tracks,
Pay no attention to hollers or foolish illegal attacks.
Cite the great new Constitution, when any paper complains,
Show 'em that it was constructed by persons of uncommon brains.
If they should dare to arrest you, charge 'em with arson or treason;
Any great lawyer will show them that's not according to reason.



The Legend of the Easy-Going Giant

An Easy-Going Giant dwelt once upon a Time among Neighbors who were actively engaged in cutting Each Other's Throats whenever the Opportunity offered.

This Giant had been frequently warned that it was Extremely Dangerous to reside in such a Neighborhood. "Some day those fellows will get you," his friends told him.

"Who, me?" he said. "Nonsense. Why should they get ME?"

"They shouldn't," said the friendly counsellors, "but when people are Fighting for their lives what they should do doesn't make Very Much Difference."

Time wore on, and the embattled Neighbors began to shoot up members of the Giant's Family who strayed into the Zone of Belligerency, and to go South with his Property whenever they laid Hands on it.

He was Warned that he had better begin to tote a Gun or to build his Fences a little higher, but he only Laughed. "I will bid them Desist," he said, "when the Proper Time arrives."

The Proper Time having duly arrived the Giant went forth from his House and said to the Warring Neighbors:

"You have shot up members of my Family and You have Destroyed My Property. Now if you do not Desist I will Make you Desist."

"What with?" inquired the Warring Neighbors in Derision. And they calmly continued to do exactly as they had been doing, while the Giant looked on in Baffled Rage, mixed with Extreme but Belated Regret that he had not done what he had been Counselled to do.

MORAL:

In Time of War Prepare for War!

Natural History Note

Man is a wolf to man—Plautus. And to judge by the wartime songs, woman is a bear to man.

Common Sense

The Kaiser has greatly reduced his household servant staff, thus insuring domestic peace, at least.

You Can't Change Human Nature

Chicago's plan to equalize rich and poor by establishing a sawdust diet won't work. The rich will insist on having rosewood and mahogany sawdust while the poor will have to be content with scrub pine.

Too Late!

The man who wants the dollar he lent Mr. Carnegie fifty years ago will probably discover that that was one of the dollars Mr. Carnegie gave to a library.

When Virtue Is Its Own Reward

Every time an explorer who has been trusted for twenty years skips with six or seven thousand dollars it develops that his integrity has been rewarded with about eleven dollars a week.

Hardly Any Cause for Alarm

A college professor has found that one of the ills of this country is the curse of cold, hard, intellectualism. But this curse, like the curse of wealth, is not particularly catching.

The Alternative

Said Witton Lackaye to the convicts at Sing Sing, on the occasion of the Lambs' descent upon that eleemosynary institution:

"Not long ago I was in a penitentiary whose warden had ideas like those of your Mr. Osborne. Calling the inmates together when he took charge he said to them: 'Now, gentlemen, you will be given many privileges here if you obey the rules. If you will treat me fairly I will treat you generously. But you must abide by the regulations. They will be fair and reasonable, but they must be scrupulously heeded. Those who are willing to abide by them will find it in their interests to do so. And as for those who are not willing, well, all I have to say to them is that if they don't like the way I am doing things here they can get out.'"

Helps for the Helpless

Here are a few additional suggestions which were omitted from the New York Mayor's committee handbook for the indigent, no doubt because it was deemed best to devote a separate pamphlet to them:

Cast-off Clothing—Torn, warmest and cast-off clothing can be used to advantage for bed clothing or for patchwork petticoats. The trousers of the father can be cut down to fit almost any one of the male children. Cast-off bed clothing can be made into slips for the baby.

Old Shoes—Old and ragged shoes can be used for the cheaper grades of soup, or can be sliced into shoe laces.

String—String, found on packages, if the family can afford to make any purchases from the grocer, can be woven into napkins or washrags with a little patience, or can be made into a very fair imitation lace, which can be worn to the dispensary or to the breadline.

Bill Writes Fine Stories

We have read a home town poem by William Allen White in the Emporia Gazette, and are of the opinion that Walt Mason ought to supply the rhymes for that publication, as heretofore.

Out of the Rear Car—A Lesson in Living

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.)

A MAN past middle age descended from an incoming train in a narrow passage leading to a large depot. He had occupied a rear car, and more than one hundred persons were in front of him when he reached the passage. Only two persons could walk abreast, and the high railing on one side and the train on the other made it necessary to keep to the narrow exit.

The man had important engagements awaiting him. He was well bred, a gentleman and considered the little courtesies of life.

Yet without violating one of these he reached the depot and the trolley car first of all those hundred persons.

He watched his chances and availed himself of them.

A woman in the line at his left dropped her parcel and stooped to recover it. He slipped in front of her without delaying any one in either line of march.

A man on the right paused to shift his baggage from the right hand to the left, and this made another opening. Still another held up the whole procession to question a train official leaning from a car window, but instead of stopping with the throng our traveler pushed ahead and found a clear space, which soon enabled him to reach the trolley car two or three moments in advance of the first man who had descended from the train. He had moved rapidly, quietly, decently and without once inconveniencing a fellow traveler.

No doubt scores of passengers from the rear cars explained their tardy arrival home, and at places of business, as due to the procession in front of them.

This same man had begun life in the rear car. He had been a poor child on a Western prairie, without influence, and with meagre opportunities for education.

Yet, by this inborn trait, this determination to watch his opportunities and push ahead, he obtained an education and a desirable position in life before middle age—obtained it through his own efforts.

Many of his old comrades are living in the same meagre environment of early youth, believing they were hindered by fate from attaining success.

They regard the good fortune of their old acquaintance as a "stroke of luck."

"He was born to be lucky," they will tell you. "Things naturally went his way."

But they went his way merely because he watched his chance and slipped ahead when the opening came.

These chances come to every one of us along the highways of life. If we are not on the lookout the line closes up before we see the open space.

Every day I live I perceive more and more clearly how the real success of life comes from within and not from without.

An intense, unswerving, fixed purpose dominates all conditions. The mind which concentrates itself upon the one idea, I must do this thing, does it eventually, no matter what obstacles intervene.

The mind which says "The procession is so long ahead of me it is useless for me to try to hurry; I must just jog along," that is the mind which never gets beyond the jogging pace. The procession is always ahead.

A score of times it separates, opens, clears, but the man who says "It is no use" is not watching and does not see his opportunities.

And he dies at the rear of the column, believing "he has had no chance."

We all have it. Few use it. Fewer still seize it.
